Who doesn't love the sound of sweet music? As we boarded the bus for our field trip to the Kennedy Center, we were very excited! We were headed to see the National Symphony Orchestra. The concert hall was so big. A man came out on stage and started playing his violin really fast! His fingers were flying over the strings. The show taught us about the language of music and how instruments communicate to each other.

There were different types of music such as symphonies, popular music and soundtracks from movies. Our favorite song was "Mambo" from West Side Story. We all got to yell "Mambo!" really loud! It was so fun. After the show we all discussed our favorite instruments. What a great day!
