I am thrilled to present the 2012 NNAAC Annual Report. As you’ll see, NNAAC had an amazing year filled with many accomplishments: engaging a record number of Arab Americans through our nonpartisan voter engagement work; leading the Eighth Annual National Arab American Service Day; hosting NNAAC’s first biannual Leadership Training Institute; and much more. This year, NNAAC also welcomed its 23rd member organization, the Levantine Cultural Center of Los Angeles.

None of the vast accomplishments you’ll see in this report would have been possible without our supporters and the many fantastic people who share their time, expertise and energy with us. Without our member organizations there would be no Network. Our Advisory Board members dedicate their time, knowledge and vision. Our supporters create the partnerships and invest the means necessary to carry our work forward. And, of course, our staff, though small in number, work so hard to ensure NNAAC’s success.

I know that after reading this report you’ll share our pride in NNAAC and our excitement about the work to come in 2013 and beyond. As always, we have ground-breaking projects on the horizon. I hope you’ll join us as we continue to move forward.

Sincerely,

Nadia Tonova

Capacity Building

NNAAC focuses on the development of member organizations and provides technical assistance to other groups through four primary programs.

1. NNAAC’s first Leadership Institute, Nov. 15-17, 2012, in Philadelphia, was attended by 27 Arab American leaders. It started with a half-day conversation for executive directors that covered hiring and financial statements. Other workshops focused on planning an annual fund campaign and securing corporate sponsorships. All sessions received high evaluations from participants, who said they appreciated the opportunity to network with colleagues from around the country. Other highlights were a concert organized by Al-Bustan Seeds of Culture, and a visit to Philadelphia Arab American Community Development Corporation to learn about their work.

2. NNAAC distributes grants to help members improve organizational development. In 2012, NNAAC awarded $39,040 in grants that included: $5,000 for case management software; $3,000 for a first-ever financial audit; $1,000 for website improvement; $3,000 toward a volunteer coordinator; and $6,000 toward a development director.

3. NNAAC maintains a scholarship fund for training. In 2012, $7,000 was awarded for grant writing; domestic violence services; effective use of donor management software; executive director training; and board leadership.

4. NNAAC provides in-depth consultation, technical assistance, webinars, and distribution of resource information to address capacity building. Topics of support in 2012 included: board-staff relations, hiring an executive director, by-laws revision, individual donor solicitation, and corporate sponsorships.

“What I liked best was the chance to network and learn from other nonprofits that share our challenges and offer similar programming.”

Community Service

National Arab American Service Day
National Arab American Service Day (NAASD) brings together thousands of volunteers from across the country to give back to their communities. Under the motto, “Serving Communities, Connecting People,” NAASD drew Arab Americans and non-Arabs in 11 states, including nine major cities, for a day of volunteerism. On May 19, 2012, volunteers around the country turned out for the Eighth Annual Service Day. They worked on 18 projects including parks clean-up, health screenings, food packaging and more.

Acts of Kindness 9/11 Service Day
In an annual event that has created a model for national expansion, hundreds of Detroit area volunteers gathered Sept. 9, 2012, for A-OK Service Day. The event is organized by Acts of Kindness (A-OK), a coalition of some 20 local nonprofit and faith organizations dedicated to inspiring community spirit and interfaith education. Started in 2010, A-OK’s mission is to transform 9/11 from a day of mourning into a day of hope by giving back to our communities. This year’s event, which focused on food security, yielded impressive results. More than 4,000 boxes of food were prepared; some 11,000 meals were packaged; nearly 3,000 information kits were created for local schools to teach children about nutrition; and hundreds of bagged lunches were assembled for the homeless.

“Many thanks to NNAAC for granting us this opportunity. It is very empowering to our organization and community, as well, knowing we are part of a great organization that is continuously responding to our needs.”

Advocacy and Civic Engagement

NNAAC continues to build the national political power of the Arab American community via local groups and grassroots mobilization.

Through a core team of organizational members, NNAAC created a policy platform to guide its advocacy work throughout the year. That platform focused on immigration reform; access to education for all; protection of civil liberties; and increased funding for critical social service programs.

In 2012, NNAAC elevated the voice of the Arab American community in the national conversation on racial and religious profiling by law enforcement, advocated for the passage of ERPA (End Racial Profiling Act) and for eliminating discriminatory programs within the immigration system. NNAAC staff members also testified at three congressional briefings on Capitol Hill and presented workshops and trainings at national conferences across the country.

In April, NNAAC held its Fourth Annual Arab American Advocacy Week, in which 25 Arab American leaders strategized and met with government officials and elected representatives to advocate for issues highlighted in NNAAC’s policy platform and held extensive strategy sessions with allies.

We are proud to report that NNAAC also has increased the capacity and number of organizations actively participating in advocacy campaigns through one-on-one technical assistance, webinars, and training and funding opportunities.
Elections

During the 2012 election cycle, the National Network for Arab American Communities (NNAAC) led an unprecedented nonpartisan voter engagement campaign. Never before has NNAAC engaged its partners in such a strategic way, reaching hundreds of thousands of Arab Americans across the country.

Ten NNAAC member organizations were particularly active in this work, including groups in Michigan, New York, California, Illinois, Florida and Pennsylvania. NNAAC registered more than 5,280 new voters; reached more than 105,000 people through Get Out The Vote (GOTV) phone calls nationally; and knocked on 13,000 household doors.

In collaboration with member organizations and national partners such as the Arab American Institute, NNAAC also held four candidate forms, Halloween-themed canvassing events, plus multiple trainings for NNAAC members. We also played a key role to ensure extensive voter protection on Election Day and gave special assistance to Hurricane Sandy victims to make sure they had access to the polls.

The momentum of 2012 will continue to fuel and strengthen the electoral power of the Arab American community nationally through grassroots organizing.

“Through NNAAC’s National Arab American Voter Activation Initiative, AAANY has increased voter participation among Arabs and Muslims in New York City. With each election cycle, we are building our communities’ base through voter registration, education, and mobilization.”

The National Network for Arab American Communities (NNAAC), a project of ACCESS, is a national consortium of independent Arab American community-based organizations. The Network's primary mission is the development of Arab American community-based nonprofit organizations that understand and meet the needs and represent the concerns of Arab Americans at the local level and collectively address these issues on the national level.

NNAAC, which was established in 2004, currently has 23 members in 11 states. To support its mission, NNAAC has three main programs: Capacity Building, Advocacy & Civic Engagement, and Community Service.
