

Sharing About Your Battle Experience

Your testimony is the most important part of sharing about the Battle.

What have you experienced in your life and your relationships that made the investment in the Battle worth it? You might base conversations on 1-2 of the following talking points:

- The Four Realities:
How is your life being transformed as you see more clearly the Larger Story, your part in it, the ways evil is hunting you, and your need for the Fellowship?
- The Whole Heart:
What are you discovering about your deep desires? In what ways are you becoming more fully alive as the man or woman God created you to be?
- The Battle for Your Heart:
How is recognizing and engaging the battle affecting you? How is your ability to love those in your domain flourishing or growing?
- Clarifying What Is at Stake:
What was the cost—to you, God and your domain—of not recognizing the battle, the Story or your whole heart? What has been the gain—to you, God and your domain—of engaging the battle and living in the Larger Story from your whole heart?
- The Fellowship:
How has opening your heart to the Fellowship of the Trinity, the Word of God, the Body of Christ and the Communion of Saints affected you? How do they protect you?
- Mission:
How have you grown to engage in your mission to reveal God's heart to your domain? What impact are you seeing in your domain as you fulfill that mission?

When Others Are Curious or Interested:

- Be sensitive to the desires that are being stirred, and invite them to share those desires. Cover their vulnerability.
- Don't blow them away, particularly with too much emphasis on the potential emotional impact of the event or too much use of Battle language that is unfamiliar to them.
- Set realistic expectations. Explain what it will take for them to experience this kind of life change. You could do so by walking them through the six elements of change. "See __" (the title and location of the 6 elements doc)
- Offer to meet with them and others who may be interested in being part of their team.
