Seattle's new 26-block park brings numerous engaging public spaces. In the surrounding waterfront district, parking lots are becoming apartment buildings; historic buildings are being restored to bring street-level retail. Many surrounding projects are currently underway, adding innovative office space, modern residential, local restaurants, sidewalk cafes, music venues, and retail experiences. The result will be a vibrant Waterfront District that will attract the entire city to shop, eat and play.

NEW PROJECTS, NEW VITALITY.

Embracing the future of Seattle's new waterfront district

SEATTLE'S FUTURE WATERFRONT PARK

PIER 62/63 OPEN 2019
26-BLOCK WATERFRONT PARK OPEN 2022

Seattle's central shoreline is being transformed with a park that will reconnect our city to Elliott Bay and protect the shoreline with a rebuilt seawall. The park will create new public space for people to experience the water while enjoying unique views of the Olympic Mountains and Elliott Bay. Waterfront Park will have better transit connections and improved access for the entire city and 9 million annual ferry riders.

PIKE PLACE MARKETFRONT

GRAND OPENING JUNE 29, 2017

The future waterfront starts here.

Seattle's historic Pike Place Market is growing with MarketFront offering an expanded mix of local shops and restaurants, craft and farm tables, and additional low income housing units.

- Mixed-use facilities for events, workshops and other activities
- 12,000 sf of local shops and restaurants
- 47 craft/farm tables
- 40 low income senior housing units
- 300 new parking stalls

ELLIOTT BAY SEAWALL NOW COMPLETE

Designed with ecology in mind. Engineered for the future.

The Elliott Bay seawall is built to current seismic standards and is designed to last more than 75 years. Improvements include stabilizing the existing soil behind the seawall face and features to create additional support for aquatic habitat. The Seawall Project is the foundation for transforming Seattle's future waterfront. Walk on the glass bricks above the salmon migration corridor as you stroll the water's edge.

The new seawall will:

- Last more than 75 years
- Protect public safety
- Improve nearshore ecology
- Act as the foundation of Seattle's future waterfront

NEW PUBLIC SPACES COMING SOON

PIER 62 & 63

Pier 62/63 is surrounded by water on three sides, offering spectacular water and mountain views. The rebuilt pier will be a place to stroll, enjoy views, and play with open space for activities like soccer, and direct water access via a floating dock. Flexible event space will host activities including concerts and markets.

LOVE OF VIEWS

With the removal of the viaduct, elevated overlooks, spaces and places along the waterfront are being created for the public to enjoy the breathtaking views of Elliott Bay, Puget Sound, Mount Rainier, and Olympic Mountains.

OVERLOOK WALK

Overlook Walk will be a public plaza and viewing deck connecting the urban core and Pike Place MarketFront to the future waterfront. The fully accessible walkway is a beautiful park within a park, offering integrated gardens, children's play areas, and elevated views of Elliott Bay, Puget Sound, Mount Rainier, and the Olympic Mountains.

ACTIVITIES & EVENTS

Through Hot Spot, Friends of Waterfront Seattle offers free events that welcome the community to experience Seattle's central waterfront in new ways preparing for the future 26-block waterfront park.

ACCESS

Connections include a dedicated bike path, enhanced ferry access, pedestrian walkways, the new Alaskan Way with a transit hub at Columbia Street, and Overlook Walk, an accessible elevated connection between the Pike Place Market and the Seattle Aquarium.
