

Organised by:

Hosted by:

READY FOR

THE ANNUAL 20MPH PLACES CONFERENCE

FRIDAY 26 FEBRUARY 2016

THE GUILDHALL, CITY OF LONDON

Wide area 20mph limits are being adopted in most of the UK's iconic cities and there is pressure for 20mph to become the national default limit where people live, work, shop and learn.

The recognition of benefits from setting such a standard now go far beyond road danger reduction to include a more attractive public realm, public health, active travel, noise and emission reduction, traffic reduction, etc. and are complementary to so many other public realm interventions. It is also being adopted around the world in the form of a 30kmh limit for urban and community spaces and as an essential element in a "safe system" approach to road safety.

Presentations at the conference will include:

- Mayoral "Visions for Transport" and the place for a 20mph default for London
- The opportunities to provide a foundation for active travel and improved public health
- Best practice implementation and engagement
- The real benefits for vulnerable road users, pedestrians and cyclists
- 20mph/30kmh – the developing international benchmark for liveability

The conference will be hosted by City of London Council and bring together presenters from political parties, local authorities, academics, NGOs and consulting organisations.

Who should attend:

- Public health officers
- Local councillors
- Highways officers
- Key service providers
- Transport planners
- Police

Speakers include:

Caroline Pidgeon, Liberal Democrat candidate in the 2016 London Mayoral election

Siân Berry, Green Party candidate in the 2016 London Mayoral election

Sadiq Khan, Labour Party candidate in the 2016 London Mayoral election (invited)

Zac Goldsmith, Conservative Party candidate in the 2016 London Mayoral election (invited)

Dr Adrian Davis, Public Health and transport expert

Lucy Saunders, Consultant in Public Health, Greater London Authority and Transport for London

Rod King MBE, Founder, 20s Plenty for Us

Iain Simmons, Assistant Director (City Transportation), City of London Corporation

For more information and to book online visit: TransportXtra.com/events