Page 4: ALL CANDIDATES: Candidate Background and Free Response

Q16

Please describe your background (education, employment, community and civic activity, labor union affiliation etc.)

I live in West Seattle, where I was raised. Graduated from West Seattle High School and the University of Washington, where I earned my Bachelor's Degree in Political Science, Master's Degree in Urban Planning, and Law Degree.

I've been a licensed attorney for 30 years and worked on many community projects before winning election to Washington's House of Representatives in 1996 and the Senate in 2000. I joined the King County Council in 2002, and in 2009 defeated future Republican state chair Susan Hutchison for the office of King County Executive.

As Executive, I have made our progressive values and Democratic ideals real, in policy and practice, creating a forward-thinking, responsive government in pursuit of our True North: To make King County a welcoming community where every person can thrive.

And so, I have led the COVID-19 response, based on science; created Health through Housing; established the Regional Homelessness Authority; created the Land Conservation Initiative, the Clean Water Healthy Habitat Initiative, and a nation-leading Climate Action Plan; elevated Equity and Social Justice and an ESJ Plan that leads with racial justice; bolstered Metro service, launched full fleet electrification, and led creation of Sound Transit 3; created Best Starts for Kids.

Q17

Please describe your history of involvement (if any), with particular emphasis on the last five years, in local, regional, and/or state politics.

King County Executive (2009)

King County Councilmember – 8th District (2002)

State Senator – 34th LD (2000)

State Representative – 34th LD (1996)

Chair, 34th LD Democrats (1991-1994)

Precinct Committee Officer – 34th LD (1989 – 1999)

While King County is overwhelmingly represented by Democrats, I know from experience that to ensure true progress on all the issues that matter to progressives – and King County residents – we must support Democrats up and down the ballot, and all across the state. As a result, beyond my own campaigns, I have worked on dozens, perhaps hundreds, of candidate and issue campaigns – in King County and beyond.

I regularly raise funds and stump for state and local Democratic candidates and progressive ballot initiatives. As County Executive, I have been deeply involved in the countywide ballot measures submitted to the voters, and in their successful campaigns. In recent years, these include bold new efforts like Sound Transit 3 and Best Starts for Kids, as well as levy and bond renewals like the Veterans, Seniors, and Human Services levy; King County Parks levy; and the Harborview modernization and expansion measure.

Please describe the progress of your campaign and goals. How do you plan to win?

I'm excited by our campaign. We have a great team with diverse perspectives and experience. The outpouring of public support and encouragement has been phenomenal. We have nearly $300,000 cash on hand, and have earned the early endorsements of MLK Labor; SEIU 6, 775, 925, and 1199NW, Teamsters 117 and Laborers 242; Governor Inslee; over 40 Democratic current and former state legislators – including the vast majority of King County's delegation; the majority of the County Council; and mayors representing over two-thirds of King County's city residents.

Our path to victory includes highlighting our unprecedented accomplishments – but more importantly showing the remarkable opportunities presented by this moment to drive rapid transformation and advance our vision for a better community and nation – through significant outreach to voters.

My goals for this campaign are to build broad support for bold, transformational progress in the coming years, and to support Democrats up and down the ballot who can help make that progress real. We have an opportunity to show the people what is possible, and share the great work we are doing at the county – acting on urgent priorities, building an efficient, effective government, and setting a high bar for the state and nation.

Q19

What issues do you think deserve more attention from media or elected officials? How would you seek to remedy that through your campaign or when elected?

While I'm pleased to finally see some progress on capital gains, Washington's tax code remains horribly regressive. As Senator I co-authored legislation creating the State Tax Study Commission. The state's tax system is terribly unfair to lower income and working people, while also inadequate to the public need for services and infrastructure. I will continue fighting for tax reform based on the principle that everyone should contribute based on their ability to pay.

Another issue is our push to move investments upstream. For example: early childhood development, access to child care, and renewal of our groundbreaking Best Starts for Kids. I led the development of BSK – the most comprehensive child development program in the nation, supporting children by investing in families to foster healthy growth and prevent adverse experiences, so kids reach kindergarten healthy and ready to learn, and youth reach young adulthood prepared to succeed.

I proposed expanding Best Starts to include subsidized, quality child care for 3,000 children whose families can't afford it - especially in marginalized communities - and the support to recruit and retain qualified caregivers. This renewal will bolster services for new parents, child care support, afterschool programs, child and family homelessness prevention, and more.

Q20

How do you plan to involve all residents and engage all communities in the decision making process? How would you work with people who lack trust in our institutions?

I've worked to transform how we interact with communities from a centralized, top-down approach to broad networks of trusted, community-based organizations. With this approach, we dramatically reduced the uninsured rate with the Affordable Care Act, signed people up for new low-income ORCA Lift bus passes, and are getting COVID vaccines to people in historically marginalized communities. I funded community participation – so that you don't have to be well off to be a full partner in co-creating our county's future, including participatory budgeting for unincorporated communities of White Center and Skyway.

Most of the issues we face – from climate change to homelessness – are regional. It's crucial to work with cities, tribes, schools, counties, and state and federal government. I've served on innumerable regional committees, and know from experience that by identifying common challenges, and focusing on shared values, we can develop solutions. I'm proud of the strong foundation of regionalism we're building, and passionate about continuing.

Any attempt at co-creation must include purposeful, targeted outreach to disenfranchised communities, with resources to enable full participation. Community buy-in is important, but authentic input, based on life experience, is most valuable for creating successful policy. This will always be a priority for my administration.

Q21

COVID has increased existing inequities. How will you use your office to support the most vulnerable? How would you promote an equitable recovery and create opportunity for all?

I was elected during a global financial crisis, when the world saw that austerity was exactly the wrong approach for governments during an economic downturn. When the economy slumps is when government most needs to step up. As the pandemic and recession have unfolded, I've maintained critical county services and jobs, explored new revenue options, and used the county's credit to keep workers working.

We secured hotels for people experiencing homelessness. We restricted jail bookings, and took other measures to lower the detention population by hundreds. We partnered with CBOs that work with marginalized communities. As the pandemic continues, we must protect essential workers, who have selflessly risked to serve us. We must maintain support for working and low-income people, renters, seniors, immigrants, and others who are struggling the most. There's no doubt that COVID has intensified existing inequities.

By calling on those who are doing well during the pandemic – namely better-off individuals and corporations – to do their part and pay their fair share, we can help those who have been disproportionately burdened. COVID recovery is an opportunity to rethink our economy, and how we can use this crisis to build a more equitable, resilient County for all.

Q22

If elected, how will you use your position to address racial inequality, and advance an anti-racist agenda? How specifically would you support the Black Lives Matter movement?

I have built our Equity and Social Justice commitment – from initiative, to office, to strategic plan, to government-wide imperative.

In June 2020, I joined Public Health Director Patty Hayes in declaring racism a public health crisis. In doing so, working with a core team of predominantly Black, Brown, and Indigenous employees, I proposed an Anti-Racist Policy Agenda and funded community groups to share expertise and hone the agenda (what's missing, what doesn't belong, etc.) to ensure we were prioritizing the right actions. My seventh COVID supplemental budget includes tens of millions of dollars of investment to support that agenda.

I have declared and am funding our commitment to new economic opportunity for underrepresented and BIPOC communities and businesses; and criminal legal system transformation including youth diversion, restorative justice, and permanent reduction in jail population, and the herculean tasks of closing centralized youth detention and the downtown Seattle adult jail.

I recognize my personal privilege and know I don't share the experience of those who have been consistently marginalized. That's why it's been a priority for me to build diverse teams, in my office and in coalitions; seek feedback from community leaders; and continually expand my knowledge and understanding.

How have you worked to combat climate change and promote climate justice? How would you use your elected office to ensure King County drastically lowers net carbon emissions by 2030 and achieves carbon neutrality by 2050?

I pushed King County's first Climate Action Plan to be one of the nation's most ambitious. Since then, we've continued updating our policies, strategies, goals and targets to match the evolving climate science and ensure King County is doing our part and more.

Our newest plan will cut regional carbon emissions in half within the decade, electrifying our entire transit fleet, building electric light rail across the three-county metro region, increasing transit mode share, greening the built environment through regional planning and green building, and planting and saving three million more trees (on top of the million planted by King County and partners during the past four years). We are embedding environmental justice throughout our efforts – investing in the frontline communities that have long borne the brunt of pollution.

Further, in preserving and creating parks and greenspaces, a critical aspect of local action, we ensure that people in every community can easily access our beautiful environment, by implementing the Land Conservation Initiative and growing our groundbreaking Trailhead Direct program. I will continue to push for innovative and necessary environmental policies that both combat climate change and protect and restore our regional environment for generations today and to come.

Q29

King County plays an important role in providing many health and human services, as evidenced in the County's response to the COVID-19 pandemic. What has King County done well in its response to COVID? What would you continue, expand, and change? Do you support increased funding for many health and human services? How would you fund those services - even after the pandemic is over?

The first U.S. COVID-19 outbreak occurred in King County. We had no road map. No help from the White House. I consulted public health experts, then acted calmly and decisively to protect health and save lives. King County has the lowest COVID death rate of the 20 largest metropolitan areas in the country.

This success belongs to us all – a public that cared more about community than ideology or self-interest; employers who quickly and uncomplainingly went remote; and our focus on the vulnerable, including neighbors experiencing detention or homelessness. Knowing we'd have to make many decisions, quickly, we convened a Pandemic Advisory Council of community leaders with trusted relationships throughout our county.

BIPOC communities faced disproportionate impacts and had less access to vaccines. So we are focusing mass vaccine sites and community partner outreach on those who've been disenfranchised. Our recovery plans invest in a more equitable economic future.

No one has done more for public health and human services than my administration: the Mental Illness/Drug Dependency fund, Best Starts for Kids, Health through Housing, the Veterans, Seniors and Human Services levy, and Harborview. I will direct hundreds of millions from the American Rescue Plan to help people have healthy lives.

How would you advocate for alternatives to incarceration in the County's criminal legal system? How would you make zero youth incarceration a reality in King County?

When I took office, there were nearly 90 people charged as youth in detention. As of this writing, there are 12.

This took years of hard work – with judges, defenders, prosecutors, and community partners. I've called on the Council, and the community, to join me in the difficult work of preventing, diverting, and otherwise eliminating the need for centralized youth detention at all by 2025. It will take an all-community commitment to reach my goal.

Similarly, I'm determined to limit adult detention to between 2/3rds and 3/4ths of what it was pre-COVID. I have called on the Council and community to join me in preventing, diverting, and otherwise reducing the number of adults sent to detention, with the goal of closing the downtown adult jail at 5th and James, floor by floor.

I created and funded Restorative Community Pathways, which diverts youth away from the system and toward justice and growth through community mentorship and support, and a similar approach for adults arrested for felonies. The criminal legal system exacerbates racial inequities because, like every other system in society, it is entwined with a racist history. Rapid change is suddenly possible. We are not going to miss our shot.

What would you do to ensure that businesses owned by people of color have a fair shot at County contracts?

- Regional Small Business Certification: I initiated small contractor and supplier (SCS) certification program covering County, Sound Transit, Port, and Seattle Colleges.
- Priority Hire: I required hours on County projects be performed by local workers from economically disadvantaged areas. 2020 participation: 40% for apprentices and 25% for journey workers. Goal for each was 15%.
- ESJ Inclusion for Large A/E Contracts: Made a plan requirement on large architecture/engineering contracts – to maximize participation of women and minority-owned business (WMBE) subcontractors. 14 large A/E contracts in 2020.
- Small Business Accelerator: Limits competition to like-sized small businesses, so one small firm emerges as “prime”. Helps establish, grow small businesses as prime contractors.
- Reciprocal Certification: We are collaborating with the State’s WMBE office on reciprocal certification - firms certified by the state will automatically qualify locally. Intended to further increase WMBE firms on County contracts.
- Federal Disadvantaged Business Enterprise (DBE): In 2020 we awarded over 21% of Federal Transit Administration (FTA) dollars to certified DBEs. Goal was 12%.
- Apprenticeships: Our Apprenticeship Program sets requirements on public works projects for state-registered apprentices. Paid on-the-job training. In 2019, our contractors employed 577 registered apprentices, and achieved 34.6% minority apprentice participation.

"Structural racism is not always caused by racist actors – it is caused by institutional arrangements overlaid on historical policies that continue to perpetuate racialized outcomes." - Stephen Menendian How would you use your position to work to dismantle these arrangements including, but not limited to, exclusionary land use policies?

The false construct of race and white supremacy was indispensable to the genocide of the North American continent’s indigenous people and enslavement of Africans and their descendants. Even if neither overt nor even conscious, racism is entwined in the structure of every institution such that, no matter how virtuous or enlightened the individual actors, outcomes continue to be racially disparate – wages, wealth, education, incarceration, health, longevity, and on and on.

I’ve committed King County to uprooting and recasting systems – inside and outside of government - through anti-racist policies and budgets, charter amendments, implementation of the Equity and Social Justice Office and plan, and ongoing work with impacted communities.

Redlining, exclusionary zoning and the housing market in a racially biased economy have all, by design or effect, resulted in still-largely segregated neighborhoods. To secure housing, people – and disproportionately people of color - are pushed farther from jobs. Black, Indigenous and Latinx residents are overrepresented in the unsheltered population.

Excessive limits on density prevent responding to the affordable housing crisis, exacerbate transportation costs, reduce economic opportunity and are, in operation and result, racist. We will continue to expand affordable housing and housing options and insist our 39 cities do the same.
