

From The Chairman

Megan Sullivan

As a prosecutor for more than 12 years, Megan Sullivan proved to be a fierce advocate for victims and the citizens of the Commonwealth. She worked for nearly a decade as an Assistant District Attorney in Chester County. In 2017, Sullivan became a PA Deputy Attorney General where she worked to protect taxpayer dollars through her investigation and prosecution of insurance fraud committed by individuals and corporations in every industry throughout the state. She also spent an extensive period of time in the appeals unit, drafting briefs and arguing appeals before the Superior Court.

Megan Sullivan served as assistant general counsel to West Chester University, negotiating contracts, litigating labor arbitrations, and advising university departments on federal and state regulatory and higher education laws, as well as other legal matters. She also spent several years in private practice representing businesses, municipalities, and educational institutions in a range of civil litigation.

I Hate To Harsh John Fetterman's Buzz

Dear Friends,

Let's take a break from Tom Wolf's disastrous COVID vaccine rollout to discuss his disastrous state budget.

This excerpt is from the Tax Foundation.

"Imagine, for instance, that a Pennsylvania resident quits her job to open her own business. Before she quits, she has earned $80,000 in taxable wages that year, but her new business isn't profitable yet, and she posts $20,000 in losses. In any other states, the $20,000 in business losses would offset the $80,000 in wages, yielding $60,000 in taxable income. In Pennsylvania, taxable income would be $80,000, because the business losses cannot offset losses from compensation. Other classes of income include interest, dividends, and income from the sale of property.

Crucially, the business owner is also prohibited from carrying losses into future years, so not only does that $20,000 business loss not offset wages in the current year, but it cannot be deducted from business gains in a future year, either. And even in a situation where spouses had offsetting gains and losses in the same income class, and the couple files jointly, these gains and losses cannot offset."

John Fetterman wants you to have a FREE sticker for your car. That's right, FREE.

There's just one catch. You have to pay for it! That's right, John Fetterman wants to send you a free bumper sticker right after you pay for it.

Looks like John Fetterman plans on funding his campaign the same way he and his liberal friends always try to fund their government platforms: free college, free healthcare, free phones, and now free campaigns!

I want to send you a free sticker

Hey. Question for you:

Can I send you one of our official Team Fetterman stickers before they run out? Click here to get yours right now by donating any amount you choose. 🍷

"We're always happy to have a visit from a respected world leader with an established record of fiscal achievement and a grasp of the complexities of immigration and national security. But I suppose this is nice too."

-RCAC Chair Sam DeMarco upon learning of the

In Tom Wolf's world this is considered fair. A woman stepping out to open her own business to create opportunity for herself and her family and to follow a dream is penalized as part of Wolf's completely unnecessary tax grab.

I encourage you to click below and read their whole article.

The Superior Court of Pennsylvania is one of two Pennsylvania appellate courts. The Superior Court hears appeals in criminal and most civil cases from the Courts of Common Pleas throughout the entire Commonwealth and on matters involving children and families. Cases are usually heard by panels of three judges sitting in Philadelphia, Harrisburg, or Pittsburgh, but may also be heard en banc by nine judges.

Like the Supreme Court, people don't much think about the Superior Court. But it plays an important role in Pennsylvania.

With one vacancy, there are currently fourteen members of the Superior Court and it is evenly split 7-7.

I don't need the great political genius Lloyd Braun to tell me the importance of winning for Superior Court this November. That's why I'm proud to be able to support Megan Sullivan.

Megan Sullivan is a veteran litigator with twenty years of legal experience as both a criminal prosecutor and civil attorney. Over the course of her career, Sullivan developed substantial trial and legal experience as a Prosecutor in the Chester County District Attorney's office, as a Deputy Attorney General in the Pennsylvania Office of Attorney General, a litigation attorney in private practice, and general counsel for a state university.
