Transfer Public Lands

www.americanlandscouncil.org

State or Federal Control?

The Statehood Promises (enabling acts) are the same, to transfer title to the public lands for all states east and west of Colorado.

Why the Difference?

Our schools are losing millions of dollars annually because of federal land ownership in Utah.

There is "more recoverable oil" in UT, CO, & WY "than the rest of the world combined" (US GAO)

Failed federal forest policies have turned what was a productive, healthy asset into an environmental hazard and economic liability.

Only Solution Big Enough

...to fund Education, take better care of the Environment, grow the Economy, and attain Energy Independence. We can't afford not to transfer title to the States and control our lands!

Get Involved

To advance prosperity and self-reliance, improve the health of public lands, and provide increased funding for public education by securing and defending local control of land access, land use and land ownership of public and private lands. It's Been Done Before

As much as 90% of all lands in Illinois and Missouri (and AL, LA, AR, IN, FL, etc.) were federally controlled for decades! The promises are the same to dispose of the public lands. In 2009, the U.S. Supreme Court declared that Congress doesn't have the authority to unilaterally change "the uniquely sovereign character" of a state's admission into the Union, particularly "where virtually all of a state's public lands are a stake."

It's Time For Change

Federal control of public lands is destroying forests and watersheds, shutting off access, constricting economic opportunity, breaking state and local government budgets, and threatening our way of life!
