About Arise Chicago

Arise Chicago builds partnerships between workers and faith communities to fight workplace injustice through education and organizing and advocating for public policy changes.

Founded in 1991 by religious leaders to end poverty, Arise Chicago is a nationally leading local worker power organization that develops innovative ways to organize workers directly at workplaces and to win family-supporting policies. Arise Chicago opened its Worker Center in 2002 to support primarily non-union immigrant workers working in the lowest paid and least regulated industries. Arise trains, organizes, and develops the leadership of low-wage workers to make concrete improvements in their workplaces. Since 2002, Arise has supported workers to recover more than $8.7 million in owed wages and compensation, and passed several policies including Chicago and Cook County Anti-Wage Theft ordinances, creating the Chicago Office of Labor Standards; with our partners, won Chicago and Cook County Paid Sick Days; and with our coalition, passed the Illinois Domestic Workers Bill of Rights.

Background Information on “No Match” Letters

What are No Match letters?

No Match letters are an educational communication from the Social Security Administration to employers stating that a worker’s personal information (like her name or Social Security number) does not match the agency’s records.

The letters invite employers to check information and make any corrections using the Social Security database to make sure contributions sent by employers are deposited in the corresponding account for the worker to enjoy benefits such as retirement, Medicare, pension, disability and, if it is the case, survivor benefits.

Many things can generate a no match and the letters cite some examples. They may happen due to typographical errors (for example, your employer could accidentally put the wrong Social Security Number with the wrong name), unreported name changes (like in the case of marriage or divorce), or information that is missing data, and names in languages other than English.

A No Match letter, on its own, does not tell an employer anything about a worker’s immigration status. The No Match letter clearly specifies that receiving them does not imply that the worker intentionally gave wrong information. The letter states that it is “not related to work permits or immigration status”.

Also, No Match letters state that employers should not “use this letter to take any adverse action against an employee, such as laying off, suspending, firing or discriminating against that individual, just because his or her SSN or name does not match our records. Any of those actions could, in fact, violate State or Federal law and subject you to legal consequences”.
What does an employer have to do if they receive a No-Match letter?

The letters only ask the employer to “review” the information and notify the Social Security Administration if there are any needed changes, so the SSA has better information, and gives exact instructions on how to make any needed corrections.

But at the end the letters clearly say that if after following all the steps it is not possible to correct any errors, there is no need to do anything else. In short, there are no time frames or deadlines to correct anything, there is no need to fill out new forms, and there is no need to ask the worker for new information.

Old letters requested “corrections in 60 days”, but new No Match letters establish there are no time limits.

In a letter from the Acting Commissioner of the Social Security Administration to Congressman Jim Costa, clarifies that the SSA will “not take any action, nor are there any SSA-related consequences, for employers’ non-compliance with our letters”. It adds that “SSA takes no specific action other than to send the EDCOR (No Match) letter to the employer”, and that “SSA is not a law enforcement agency and our role is limited in scope to trying to ensure we credit each employee with his or her earnings…”

In simple words, the Social Security Administration does not fine or punish employers who do not reply to a No Match letter.
What should you do when your employer receives a No Match letter?

First, thank him or her for the information. Second, make clear that this is a problem between you and Social Security involving your benefits. Third, tell them that you are going to review the information.

If the employer wants to give you a deadline to correct the information, remind them that the letter does not give any deadline or time frame requirement.

If there is a mistake with information, you can go to a local Social Security office and explain the situation. The staff there should be able to help you correct your record.

If you do not have valid work authorization, you should not give your employer a false Social Security number. Even if you used a false Social Security number when you were hired, you should not present that number to your employer again and should not provide a new invalid number.

Remember that everyone has the right to keep silent regarding their immigration status. If a worker admits to their employer that they are undocumented, or lacking work authorization, the employer must by law, fire him or her immediately.

If your employer questions you about your immigration status while telling you about the No Match letter, you can say the following:

My understanding is that No Match letters do not tell you anything about my immigration status. When I was hired, you checked my documents. You should not ask me about my status because it could violate several laws.

Tell your employer that you and other workers are going to consult with an attorney or a worker center like Arise Chicago, to find the best advice to solve the problem. If you are a labor union member, immediately notify the union.

Do not resign or abandon your job just because the employer received a No Match letter. Your employer cannot use a no match letter to retaliate or discipline you for exercising your rights.

If you were fired after the employer received a No Match letter, request a clarification and your immediate reinstatement. We can help you with letters explaining the situation to the employer.

Remember: do not give up your rights!

Contact Arise Chicago by texting to 773-769-6000, or send an email to info@arisechicago.org, and come to one of our Worker Rights Workshops, where you can learn more and talk about the details of your situation.

Why You Are Getting This Letter

You reported X# employee names and Social Security numbers (SSNs) on the Wage and Tax Statements (Forms W-2) for tax year xxxx that do not match our records. There are a number of reasons why reported names and SSNs may not agree with our records, such as typographical errors, unreported name changes, and inaccurate or incomplete employer records. However, when the information reported does not match our records, we cannot credit employees’ earnings to their Social Security records. Accurate earnings records are important because these records can determine if someone is entitled to Social Security retirement, disability, and survivors benefits, and how much he or she can receive.

This letter provides useful information about free online wage reporting tools, including how to view and correct name and SSN mismatches.

IMPORTANT: This letter does not imply that you or your employee intentionally gave the government wrong information about the employee’s name or SSN. This letter does not address your employee’s work authorization or immigration status.

Do not take adverse action against an employee, such as laying off, suspending, firing, or discriminating against that individual, just because this letter identifies a mismatch between his or her SSN or name as reported to us. Those actions could violate state or federal law and subject you to legal consequences.

Helpful Tips about Resolving Name/SSN Mismatches

Resolving a mismatch

- You may have made a typographical error when submitting your report. You can correct a typographical error by submitting a Form W-2C (Corrected Wage and Tax Statement) to correct the error. See section titled Correcting mismatches with a W-2C.

- You may have accurately reported an employee’s SSN and name based on your employment records, but an error in your records caused the mismatch. Ask your employee to check their Social Security card and inform you of any name or SSN difference between your records and his or her card. You should report the SSN and name as they appear on the employee’s Social Security card. Correct your records and correct the error by submitting Form W-2C. See section titled Correcting mismatches with a W-2C.

- If your employment records and the employee’s Social Security card match, ask the employee to check with any local Social Security office to resolve the issue. Once the employee has contacted the Social Security office, they should inform you of any changes. Correct your records accordingly and submit Form W-2C if necessary. See section titled Correcting mismatches with a W-2C.

- If you are unable to resolve the mismatch using these tips, you will not be able to correct the corresponding error at this time. There is no need to take any further action.

Correcting mismatches with a W-2C
Submit a Form W-2C to correct any name/SSN mismatch as soon as you can. You may use your own software to create a W-2C file to upload to SSA. We also offer a free W-2C online service. Both of these options are only available through BSO.

Acting Commissioner
Social Security Administration

Baltimore, MD 21235-6401

RE: Employer Correction Request Notices

Dear Acting Commissioner Berryhill:

We are writing to strongly oppose the directive to impose Employer Correction Request Notices also referred as “No-Match Letters.” This action will cause numerous problems by diverting resources away from frontline workers whose primary mission is administering benefits. Additionally, this rule can result in increased discrimination and abuses against U.S. workers, particularly women.

The Social Security Administration’s (SSA) current policy already uses “front-end validation routines” to identify and address possible errors in worker names and Social Security Numbers, such as typographical errors, transpositions, and misspellings. We do not oppose the routine practice of removing records from the Earnings Suspense File (ESF). In fact, these first validation processes resolve approximately 60 percent of the reports initially categorized as mismatches. On the other hand, the cost of producing and mailing No-Match Letters and handling follow-up calls to employers was approximately $1.3 million and resulted in only 35,000 items being removed from the ESF with a case file of 39 million inaccurate records.

The $1.3 million “No-Match Letter” production cost can be used for better means to serve America’s growing Social Security beneficiary population — growing at a rate of nearly 1 million yearly. These investments could include: (1) sending earning statements to American wage earners, as the law requires, but is not being done; (2) more fully staffing existing field offices and re-opening those that have been closed in underserved areas; (3) hiring additional SSA customer service staff to operate the 1-800 number, so the American people are not confronted with long waits and busy signals; (4) clear disability backlogs; (5) increasing SSA’s core operating budget; (6) increasing field office hours; (7) improve technological advancements to aid in clearing backlogs, and (8) hiring additional administrative law judges (ALJ).

It is imperative to recognize that many legal workers -- including U.S. citizens -- will receive No-Match Letters because of clerical errors, unreported name changes, and other discrepancies in their records. The consequences include: (1) causing the firing of employment-authorized workers and U.S. citizens; (2) imposing additional costs and fees on employers; (3) increased discriminations and abuses on the basis of citizenship, nationality, or by pursuing unfair documentary practices in violation of the Immigration and Nationality Act (INA); and ultimately, (4) overwhelming SSA by diverting resources away from its mission of processing benefits in a timely way.

For the reasons above, we urge you to immediately suspend the employer No-Match letter program. Experience has proven that the program does not effectively serve its purpose and causes harmful impacts on the Social Security Administration. American workers and small businesses – serious consequences which outweigh any benefits derived from them.

Thank you for the opportunity to comment on the upcoming directive.

The Honorable Jim Costa
House of Representatives
Washington, DC  20515

Dear Mr. Costa:

Thank you for your April 11, 2019 letter regarding our resumption of mailing. Educational Correspondence (EDCOR)/Employer Correction Request (i.e. “no-match”) letters. Last year, we decided to resume mailing revised EDCOR letters to improve the accuracy of our wage reporting process. We use wage information to determine eligibility for, and the amount of, Social Security benefits that a worker – and his or her spouse or dependents – may receive. If we cannot match the name and Social Security Number (SSN) reported by the employer on a Form W-2, we cannot credit earnings to the employee’s record, which may cause errors to the benefits the employee is due.

Accordingly, our current EDCOR letters inform employers whenever they submit at least one name and SSN combination on Form W-2 that does not match our records. The letters advise employers that corrections are needed for us to properly post the employee’s earnings to the correct record, while also educating employers and encouraging them to use our online wage reporting tools to improve the accuracy of their wage reporting. Employers who use our online tools can eliminate most mismatches before submitting their wage reports, and can view and correct wage reports we could not post to an individual’s earnings record. This should have a positive effect on the accuracy of our wage reporting process. We have seen an increase in businesses using our online electronic wage reporting system and an increase in the number of users who have registered for authorization to view detailed name/SSN mismatch error information.

Enclosed, we provide responses to your specific questions. We hope you find this information helpful. If you have further questions, please contact me or have your staff contact Royce Min, our Acting Deputy Commissioner for Legislation and Congressional Affairs, at (202) 358-6030. We are sending similar responses to the cosigners of your letter.

Sincerely,

Nancy A. Berryhill
Acting Commissioner
1. How did SSA decide to reinstate the practice of sending non-match letters? Did SSA consult with Department of Homeland Security, Department of Labor, Department of Justice, Department of the Treasury, or the White House in making this decision? If so, which agencies were consulted?

We decided to resume sending the letters to improve the accuracy of our wage reporting process. However, the current EDCOR letter contains key differences from our previous letters. Specifically, the new EDCOR letter:

- does not include any Social Security Numbers (SSNs), consistent with the Social Security Number Fraud Prevention Act of 2017 (P.L. 115-59);
- is mailed to all employers who submit at least one name and SSN on a Form-W2 for an employee that does not match our records; and,
- educates employers about online services available through Business Services Online (BSO), which helps employers submit accurate wage reports by reducing the instances of no-matches before, during, and after they submit wage reports.

This last change – encouraging employers to use our free and easy-to-use online services – is consistent with SSA OIG reports that concluded we should focus efforts on encouraging use of online employer tools.

Because we process wage reports as an agent of the Internal Revenue Service (IRS), we vetted the revised EDCOR letter with IRS. Consistent with longstanding SSA practice, we engaged in pre-deliberative discussions both internally and externally with relevant stakeholders throughout the executive branch.

2. Who is receiving these letters? Is SSA attempting to reconcile W-2s and social security records for every employee in the United States? If not, how does SSA determine which employers to review? How many letters were sent and how many letters does SSA anticipate sending?

As noted above, we are sending the revised EDCOR letter to employers that submit at least one name and SSN on a Form W-2 for an employee that does not match our records (no-matches). The current letters will cover all no-matches for tax year 2018. As of April 26, 2019, we have mailed 577,349 letters. Later this fall, we plan to mail the remaining letters generated from processing paper Forms W-2 that do not match our records for tax year 2018.

3. The no-match letter asks each employer to provide any corrections within 60 days of receipt of the letter. What are the consequences for non-compliance?

These are educational letters intended to alert employers of a no-match, and to provide useful information about the online tools they can use to improve the accuracy of their wage reporting. However, if the information the employer reported is incorrect, eventually the employee may not receive the correct Social Security benefit that is due. Accordingly, we ask employers to take timely action on no-matches to ensure employees’ wages are posted correctly to our records. However, we do not take any action, nor are there any SSA-related consequences, for employers’ non-compliance with our letters.

* "No match" letters no longer contain a 60 day requirement. There is no deadline included in the letter. A communication from the SSA on November 12, 2019 confirms the removal of the 60 day correction requirement.*
4. In implementing this program, has SSA shared any information about employers and employees whose records do not match with other agencies?

Forms W-2 data, including the EDCOR letter data, is considered Federal Tax Information under section 6103 of the Internal Revenue Code (IRC); thus, we are prohibited from sharing this information with other agencies unless for a specific purpose authorized under IRC section 6103. We note that, because we process all wage reports as an agent of the IRS and its work, we share all Forms W-2 information with IRS on a daily basis, and include an indicator code when the name and SSN do not match our records.

5. If it is discovered that an employee was undocumented and/or was not authorized to work in the United States, what actions would SSA take?

As noted in the EDCOR letter, a name and SSN no-match is not an indication of an employee’s work authorization or immigration status. Because a no-match provides insufficient information to determine its cause, SSA takes no specific actions other than to send the EDCOR letter to the employer to try to resolve the no-match and ensure proper crediting of wages to employee records. SSA is not a law enforcement agency and our role is limited in scope to trying to ensure we credit each employee with his or her earnings to determine eligibility for and the amount of program benefits. Additionally, the EDCOR letter specifically advises employers not to take an adverse action against an employee based on the letter.

Accurate wage information is vital to the administration of our programs. We hope that by sending EDCOR letters to all employers, we will help them reconcile name and SSN no-matches, and, over time, use our online services to prevent such no-matches on the front-end. This will help improve the accuracy of our wage records, and ultimately ensure employees receive the benefits they are due.

6. In the letter sent to employers, SSA described reasons why the records may not be reconciled. What proportion of these records does SSA anticipate are incorrect because an employee used a false name or social security number? What proportion does SSA anticipate are incorrect because of a name change, clerical or typographical error, or incomplete information?

We do not know why an individual’s name and SSN combination do not match our records – whether it is a problem with the name or the SSN – and we do not know why employers do not make corrections. As part of our annual wage reporting process, we make every attempt to match employer reported Forms W-2 for its employees to our records. Initially, about six percent of Forms W-2 have an invalid name/SSN combination. However, by using 25 automated program routines that identify commonly occurring errors and discrepancies, such as compound hyphenated surnames or transposed digits of an SSN, we are able to post about half of these wage reports to our records. In FY 2018, we posted over 284 million earnings items to individual’s records. We do not know the reason for the remaining three percent that we could not match. Although we may not know the reason for these no-matches, it is clear that the earlier employers become aware of the errors, the easier it is to resolve them. For example, as years pass, employees may no longer work for the same company, or move. Swift corrections allows us to credit wages appropriately, keep earnings off the Earnings Suspense File and prevent future scrambled earnings workloads for the agency.
According to the Social Security Administration, "No Match" letters are educational tools for employers to learn to use the SSA databases and correct workers' information. The letters tell employers which workers have discrepancies in their information and ask for corrections in order to deposit the worker's contributions in the correct account to for their benefits such as Medicare, retirement, pension, and others.

Discrepancies may be due to typographic errors, wrong birth dates, name changes such as married or divorced last names, and error while writing or typing many names in languages other than English. The letters from the SSA specifically state “this letter is not related to work permits or immigration status of your workers.”

The letters also advise the employer to not “use this letter to take any adverse action against an employee, such as laying off, suspending, firing or discriminating against that individual, just because his or her SSN or name does not match our records. Any of those actions could, in fact, violate State or Federal law and subject you to legal consequences”. According to the Social Security Administration, they will not punish, fine or take any action against any employer who does not respond to their letters. In other words, the employer is not mandated to do anything.

Thank him/her for the information and make it clear that this is a problem between you and the Social Security Administration, since this is about your benefits, and that it is not related to your immigration status or work situation.

If the employer gives a deadline such as 10 days or 90 days, to “correct the situation”, remind them that the letter does not give any deadline or time frame.

If there is an error in your information, use the SSA Form W-2C and make the correction.

Remember you have the right to keep silent about your immigration status. Do not talk to anyone about your immigration status, because this may carry some legal consequences. If you admit to not having papers, your employer is mandated, by law, to immediately fire you.

Do not resign or abandon your job. Your employer may need a better explanation, and Arise Chicago can assist you with this clarification.

Come to Arise Chicago Worker Center or consult with an attorney. If you are a union member, immediately notify your union.

Remember: Do not take any action or declare anything before getting the correct information.

¿NO MATCH?

¿Qué son las Cartas No-Match?

Son cartas para educar a los patrones para usar la base de datos del Seguro Social y corregir errores en las cuentas de los trabajadores, y le avisan qué trabajadores tienen discrepancias en su información, para depositar las contribuciones del trabajador en las cuentas “correctas” de sus beneficios de Medicare, jubilación, pensión, y otros.

Las discrepancias pueden ser por errores de escritura, fechas de nacimiento equivocadas, cambios de nombre (como de soltera a casada y al revés), y muchos nombres y apellidos en idiomas extranjeros, y las cartas dicen que “esta carta no está relacionada con el permiso para trabajar o el estatus migratorio de sus trabajadores”.

Le advierten al patrón “no usar esta carta para tomar alguna acción en contra de un trabajador, como descansarlo, suspenderlo, despedirlo o discriminar en su contra porque su número de Seguro Social o su nombre no coincide con nuestros datos. Cualesquiera de esas acciones podría, de hecho, violar leyes estatales y federales y hacerlo a usted legalmente responsable de las consecuencias”. El Seguro Social asegura que no hay castigos, multas ni acciones contra los patrones que no respondan sus cartas. Es decir, el patrón no está obligado por ley a hacer nada.

¿NO MATCH?

¿Qué hacer si el patrón recibe la carta?

Agradezca la información y déjele claro que este es un problema entre usted y el Seguro Social; dígale que usted va a tomar cartas en el asunto.

El patrón no puede darte fechas límites para “corregir la información”. Si el patrón le da un plazo, recuérdale que la carta dice que si no se puede corregir no hay nada que hacer.

Si hay un error en la información, use la forma W-2C del Seguro Social para hacer la corrección.

Recuerde que puede guardar silencio sobre su situación migratoria. No hable con nadie sobre su situación, pues esto puede acarrear algunas consecuencias legales. Si se admite no tener documentos migratorios correctos, el patrón está obligado a despedirlo de inmediato.

Vaya a un Centro de Trabajadores como Arise Chicago o con un abogado para tener asesoría correcta. Si tiene sindicato o unión, avísele de inmediato a la organización.

No renuncie o abandone el trabajo solo porque el patrón recibió una carta No-Match. Se pueden pedir extensiones de tiempo y recibir asesoría adecuada antes de dejar el trabajo.

*Recuerde: No tome ninguna acción ni haga ninguna declaración son consultar antes y conseguir información correcta.

Si su patrón recibe una carta No-Match, comuníquese al Centro de Trabajadores Arise Chicago. Excerpt from MOU between the US Department of Labor and Homeland Security

Immigration and Labor Enforcement in the Workplace:
The Revised DOL-DHS Memorandum of Understanding (2011)

On March 31, 2011, the U.S. Department of Labor (DOL) and Department of Homeland Security (DHS) entered into a revised Memorandum of Understanding (MOU) to ensure that the two agencies’ worksite-based enforcement activities do not conflict. This 2011 MOU updates a 1998 MOU between DOL and the then-Immigration and Naturalization Service.

The purpose of the MOU is to establish a national policy goal that “immigration enforcement will not interfere with employment and labor rights enforcement in the workplace”. The MOU limits the worksite enforcement power of DHS’s Immigration and Customs Enforcement agency (ICE) when a DOL investigation is pending, and requires DOL to communicate with ICE concerning DOL’s worksite investigations, and it outlines the agencies’ commitment to protecting workers against retaliation and intimidation by employers and other parties who use threats of immigration enforcement.

The MOU is designed to protect against immigration interference during ongoing labor disputes at a workplace, including:

- the right to be paid the correct wages and overtime pay;
- the right to work under safe conditions;
- the right to workers’ compensation, family and medical leave, and employee benefits;
- the right to be free from unlawful discrimination by federal contractors; and
- the right to protection from retaliation for seeking enforcement of any of these rights.

ICE should not conduct worksite enforcement activities, including DHS Form I-9 audits, during a DOL investigation, subject to some exceptions (if enforcement activity is warranted for purposes of national security or protection of infrastructure, or if it concerns a federal crime other than an unauthorized employment violation. This provision does not mean routine cases where a worker may have used a false Social Security Number or a borrowed Employment Authorization Document to get a job), and agrees to permit DOL to interview any person detained because of ICE worksite enforcement activities.

ICE agrees to “be alert to and thwart attempts by other parties to manipulate its worksite enforcement activities for illicit or improper purposes”, and will evaluate if tips or leads concerning worksite enforcement are meant to “manipulate a pending labor dispute”, meaning retaliation carried out by an employer’s surrogate (such as local police or insurers).

The MOU is triggered by information from DOL about a labor dispute or a current investigation. DOL agrees to inform ICE of attempts made by employers and others to retaliate against workers for exercising their workplace rights or to manipulate in other ways pending labor disputes. Advocates should clarify with the DOL whether particular worker complaints or investigations are in the database that could trigger the conflict notice at ICE.

Workers who are victims of abuses under the MOU may be granted parole or deferred action as witnesses for a DOL investigation or related proceeding, and both will consider to seek visas for DOL witnesses, for example, to certify worker victims of crime for U and T visas.

To ensure the MOU is triggered, worker advocates should file complaints with DOL about unpaid wages or other violations of their labor rights, and make sure that the complaint is accepted and logged in the database. In cases where threats of retaliation have been made, or if it appears that an ICE enforcement action is imminent, the worker or advocate should immediately inform DOL of the threat.

Excerpt of NLRB ruling on E-verify

Use of E-Verify in Union workplaces: The Ruprecht Co and UNITE-HERE Local 1

The E-Verify system, a voluntary web-based system that allows enrolled employers to confirm the eligibility of their employees to work in the United States, is only mandatory for federal contractors and the federal government. Alabama, Arizona, Mississippi, and Tennessee made it mandatory for all companies by state law. Companies with over 10,000 workers and companies monitored by the Department of Homeland Security use it regularly.

On August 27, 2018, the National Labor Relations Board ruled in favor of UNITE-HERE Local 1, regarding the use of the E-Verification system with workers of a bargaining unit. The Ruprecht Co., a meat processor, was ordered by a National Labor Relations Board judge to provide the union with private immigration documents and to cease E-Verification participation upon the union’s request. Administrative Law Judge Joel Biblowitz ruled the Illinois-based company should negotiate with the union over its use of E-Verify.

The NLRB’s decision started with an I-9 Audit by Immigration and Customs Enforcement. After the Audit, Ruprecht enrolled in E-Verify to prevent losing workers in future Audits. The company did it without consulting the Union. After the Union challenged Ruprecht use of E-Verify, the NLRB ruled that since federal regulations give unions the right to an opportunity to bargain when terms and conditions of employment are set to be changed, and since enrollment in E-Verify is voluntary, and that the use of the program can fundamentally change the hiring process, the Union had the right to bargain such use. The union had also requested documents from ICE identifying employees subject to the I-9 Form, and Ruprecht provided them with the employees’ names redacted. The union requested the unaltered documents, and the NLRB ruled that the letters were relevant to the union’s role as a protector and representative of affected employees. Ultimately, the judge ruled that Ruprecht should provide the union with letters from ICE and rescind its participation in E-Verify.
NLRB decision that immigration-related worker intimidation violates federal law

In October of 2019, the National Labor Relations Board (Region 13), issued a decision against the results of an NLRA election where the employer (RAYMUNDO’S FOOD GROUP, LLC) had used immigration language to scare workers.

The Case (13-RC-244834), brought up by the UNITED FOOD AND COMMERCIAL WORKERS, LOCAL 881 was that the employer had hired a “labor consultant” who told the workers “that the federal government would go and ‘knock on our doors.’ (Tr. 24, 27-28) The employee witness testified that she interpreted this statement to mean that immigration officials would knock on her door and she would be deported.” (*)

“The Board has determined that an employer’s statements can be objectionable conduct where the statements threaten employees by telling them that their union conduct can lead to a heightened scrutiny of their immigration status... Statements that touch on employees’ immigration fears are the most intense, and they invoke the fear “not only of employment loss, but of removal from their very homes as well.” Id. at 413 (citing Viracon, Inc., 256 NLRB 245, 246-247 (1981)).”

The union campaign had arisen from a No Match letter situation, and the NLRB took this fact into consideration. “These principles articulated in Labriola (361 NLRB 412, 414 (2014) are applicable to the facts of this case. The Employer’s “the federal government would go and knock on our doors” statement was an implied threat linked to the employees' immigration status and potential deportation. The implication that the government would “knock on our doors” in the context of a union campaign was patently false, and from the perspective of a reasonable employee was said for no other purpose than to stoke fear among the employees as it relates back to the no-match letters. To conclude that the statement credited to (labor consultant Gustavo) Flores was not sufficiently linked to the immigration status of the employees and/or potential deportation is to ignore the employees’ heightened concern surrounding the no-match letters (Tr. 76, R. Exhibit 2) and the conversations that the Employer was having with its employees about its no-match letters.”

The NLRB, considered that “Accordingly, given the threatening nature of the repeated statement to employees, and the contemporaneous no-match letters as discussed above, the decision to overturn the election is appropriate.”, and ordered a new election.

A second election was won overwhelmingly by the workers in favor of union representation.
