

Community climate survey host kit

We can't wait another three years for our elected representatives to get their act together.

That's why you hosting a community climate survey action is so important. Along with hundreds of others right across Australia, you'll make this a huge campaign for our planet and the people we love. Our plans are big, bold and ambitious – and by hosting you're helping others who care to stand up and get involved.

YOUR ROLE AS A HOST

- Set a location, time and date to survey your community – and let ACF know so we can help you recruit others.
- Make sure you have all of the resources (listed below) before the day of the action. Get in touch with your ACF contact for any questions about this.
- Be the contact person for volunteers for your action, and ACF staff (if needed).
- Coordinate the community climate survey action on the day (step-by-step outline below), making sure every volunteer gets briefed and has the resources they need for the action.
- Collect each volunteer's petitions and conversation reports at the end of the action, then upload them at www.acf.org.au/results.

RESOURCES

All resources are available on the ACF website at www.acf.org.au/conversation_resources

1. Community climate survey script: Bring 10 copies of this for each volunteer (don't forget yourself!).
2. Petition: Bring a copy for each volunteer, plus 2 or 3 extra just in case. Collect these at the end.
3. Conversation report: This is for each volunteer to report back on every conversation they have, whether people sign the petition or not. Make sure you also collect these at the end.
4. Flyer: Bring a copy for each volunteer for them to show people in conversations.
5. Conversation training video (COMING SOON!): A video for everyone to watch before your survey – either at home beforehand or together on the day.

STEP-BY-STEP

BEFORE THE EVENT

Set up your local survey event:

1. Choose a time and a place for you to survey people in your community. Outside busy shopping centres are great, as are kids' footy matches, markets, your church, local park or anywhere else you can think of. Plan on a three hour session, so you have enough time to meet, brief the other volunteers who join you, survey your community, then debrief.

2. Pick a good spot to meet the volunteers who join you – ideally somewhere that’s easy for people to find, and where you can sit down and have a chat when everyone arrives. Maybe some park benches, a rotunda or a cafe?
3. Register your community climate survey at https://www.acf.org.au/signup_events. If you created an event at Count Me In, we’ll register that event for you.

Before you go surveying:

1. Recruit others to join you. Let your friends and family know what you’re doing, and share the link to your event widely. The more people in your team, the more people you’ll be able to talk to. Of course, you can do the action on your own too, and as often as you like.
2. Get everything ready for the day. Familiarise yourself with the conversation resources and make sure you have enough copies for each volunteer. Watch the training video so that you feel comfortable with the conversation. Remember you don’t need to know everything there is to know about climate change, you’re just talking to real people and empowering others to do the same.
3. Get in touch with your volunteers the day before – either send them a text or give them a call. Confirm the details, remind them to look at the conversation resources beforehand (especially the training video), and remind them to bring water, a pen and a clipboard or something else to write on.

What to bring on the day:

Bring for each volunteer (including yourself!):

10 conversation scripts	1 copy of the flyer	1 conversation report
1 petition sign-up sheet	A few spare pens in case people forget their own

And for yourself, bring: your clipboard, mobile phone (in case volunteers need to contact you), and water.

ON THE DAY

Welcome and brief everyone:

1. Arrive 15 minutes early and as people gather, introduce yourself and others. 5 minutes after your arranged meeting time, brief your group. In summary:
2. Welcome everyone, and briefly remind people why having these conversations are important. Use the flyer to talk people through the strategy for the campaign.
3. Invite each person to introduce themselves, and share why they care enough to be here volunteering today. People will share their personal narrative in the conversations during the survey, so this is a good time to get people to practice!
4. Hand out the resources and take them through the script, and if people haven’t seen the training video (or want to see it again), watch it together on someone’s phone.
5. See if people would like to practice with each other before starting (this might take 10-15 minutes).
6. Answer any questions people might have. If you’re not sure, don’t worry – this is an ongoing learning process and you can help each other troubleshoot again when debriefing after your surveys.
7. Agree as a group on:

- A time and place to reconvene afterwards. You might like to schedule a time in the middle to check in or have a quick break. It's up to you!
- Who will cover what area.

Get surveying!

Get out there and have conversations! Remind people to fill in their conversation reports as they go, and don't forget to take a few photos so we can show how many of us are out across the country surveying our communities.

1. Debrief and collect each petition and conversation report. Hear how people went, and share things that went well or were difficult. Feel free to pass any feedback on to ACF by emailing community@acf.org.au.
2. Thank everyone and encourage them to host their own community climate survey, or come to another one! Let them know that in the week of July 15-20, there will be a national week of action where they can join others in the ACF community to deliver the results from their conversations. Make sure you collect everyone's petitions and conversation reports, but they can keep their scripts for meeting with their MP. You might like to invite people to join you for a coffee afterwards – this is, after all, a social movement!

AFTER THE EVENT

After your survey:

1. Report back by taking photos of the petitions and conversation reports, then uploading them on our website at www.acf.org.au/results. This is critical for us to build our movement and demonstrate our collective power.
2. Deliver the results to your elected representatives. We'll be in touch about the national week of action July 15-20 when people all across the country will be telling their local MPs about their conversations and what people want them to do.

Good luck!
