

At the BC Housing Commission, I have come to believe in the values this organization stands for and all the good work that it does. Though no organization, whether large or small, can have a focus on its mandate and vision without all the good people that dedicate themselves everyday to believe in the values as well promote the services for a better future for British Columbians.

I have witnessed the amount of work, training and emotional resilience that is required of everyone to perform their tasks and as such, I strongly feel that employment related concerns and a positive outlook for the future should be the least of trepidations.

Over the years, I have had the opportunity to work within a union environment both in the capacity as a union member as well as management. This has allowed me to experience perspectives from both sides and validated my outlook that without a strong partnership, organizational goals and successful opportunities cannot be achieved.

With that objective in mind, I am enthusiastic to bring to the bargaining table, my experience in collective bargaining. I am very excited and passionate about representing our members. My sincere hope is that meaningful, productive and effective discussions will produce positive outcomes as we look to a mutually bright future.

As a member of the bargaining committee, I am committed to working conscientiously and in good faith as your advocate to bring your concerns for a better future for all of us at the bargaining table.

In solidarity,
Karim Ladha
