BMe

LEADERS

Introduction

BMe Community is a 501(c)(3) non-profit organization that helps build caring and prosperous communities inspired by Black men. It is a growing community of engaged Black men and other community-builders. We recognize Black men as assets to society, and invite people of all race, sex, and gender to work together to create prosperous communities in a variety of areas, including youth development, entrepreneurship, financial literacy, public health, violence prevention, strategies for successful re-entry, and protecting the environment, just to name a few.

BMe Leaders are inspired Black male owners, doers and builders who join BMe on its quest to build more caring and prosperous cities. They lead by example and work with others for the common good, ultimately helping to change our cities' futures for the better. Each BMe Leader receives grant funding, along with opportunities to network and collaborate with other Leaders and partners within the BMe Community.

We hope you will take a moment to get to know these BMe Leaders on the following pages, and we invite you to link to our uplifting network by texting 'Brother' to 96000. It's that easy to stay inspired!

Congratulations to the 2014 BMe Leaders!

BMe LEADERS BALTIMORECHAZ ARNETT

Criminal Justice and Reentry

Attorney Chaz Arnett uses his Harvard education and technology to protect young people from court and police abuse.

Chaz, a graduate of both Morehouse College and Harvard University Law School, represents kids in the courtroom who could not otherwise protect themselves. He is currently developing an app that will empower families to report police misconduct.

Chaz is active in Harvard's Black Law Students Association. As part of his personal mission, he develops mentorship and education programs in inner cities. His more recent projects include a street law program and a school-to-prison pipeline project. Arnett believes that parents and families play an important role inside and outside the courtroom and engages families throughout the process.

CONTACTchaz.arnett@gmail.comBMe LEADERS BALTIMORE*MUNIR BAHAR

Health and Wellness; Mentoring and Youth Development

Munir Bahar leads others to stop violence by helping them to overcome negative self-images and lack of self-esteem.

Munir spent his teen years re-entering and exiting the criminal justice system, and now leads several anti-violence initiatives in Baltimore, MD. He is the founder of COR Fitness, a mentorship program that mobilizes black boys to become builders of their communities. His leadership in Baltimore's anti-violence movement inspired the annual 300 Men March.

BMe LEADERS BALTIMOREDAMION COOPER

Health and Wellness, Mentoring and Youth Development, Criminal Justice and Reentry

Damion Cooper uses his startling life's story to teach lessons of forgiveness and redemption via mentorship.

While mentoring a young person in prison, he discovered that his mentee was the assailant who shot him years earlier. This inspired him to create lessons on forgiveness and redemption through mentorship.

Today, as Director of Neighborhood Constituent Relations for the Baltimore City Council, Cooper is an advocate for young people inside and outside the criminal justice system. He is also a youth minister and martial arts trainer at the Warlords Academy.

CONTACTdamionjcooper@gmail.comBMe LEADERS BALTIMORE*MICHAEL FRANKLIN

Health and Wellness, Education, Mentoring and Youth Development

Michael Franklin educates students away from racism, and homophobia and toward better health and wellness in Baltimore City Public Schools.

Mike breaks down barriers between young people with conversations surrounding race, class, gender, sexuality, and power. He says that by creating a safe space infrastructure, important discussions can take place on the cultural realities surrounding Lesbian, Gay, Bisexual and Transgender (LGBT) youth.

BMe LEADERS BALTIMOREPRESTON GREENE

*Economic Opportunity, Health and Wellness,
Mentoring and Youth Development*

Preston Greene reminds us that retirees are dynamic builders and innovators too.

Preston Greene is not your typical 'retired' citizen. He fights for equitable food development, creates technology for neighborhood development and recently recruited a grocery store to a community that was once a "food desert".

Preston is President of the Northwest Development Roundtable, a coalition of community residents and several Baltimore neighborhoods fighting for equitable development. He says that recruiting the market to his community took 15 years. His determination led to the creation of more than 200 new jobs in the community.

pgreene@howardparkca.orgBMe LEADERS BALTIMORE*FAGAN HARRIS

Economic Opportunity, Education, Mentoring and Youth Development, Criminal Justice and Reentry

Fagan Harris demonstrates the benefit of investing in education for all of Baltimore's children.

Fagan Harris, a Rhode Scholar who was once placed in special education, is reshaping the way local businesses and philanthropies cultivate homegrown talent through his Baltimore Corp Fellows enterprise.

A Stanford graduate, leader and entrepreneur, Fagan believes Baltimore's talent should be developed for Baltimore's benefit. As a child he was placed in special education classes even though he clearly can and has excelled academically. Fagan's life illustrates that such undervaluing of young people's potential undermines Baltimore's prosperity.

BMe LEADERS BALTIMOREWALTER LOMAX

Criminal Justice and Reentry

Walter Lomax responds to injustice by restoring justice.

Walter spent 46 years of his life fighting the criminal justice system as a victim of wrongful conviction. He chooses to use his experience to empower his community and advocate on the side of justice.

Walter, while he was still in prison, founded the Maryland Restorative Justice Initiative (MRJI), a collection of profiles of men and women who made mistakes as teenagers, redeemed themselves, but remain behind bars at the taxpayer's expense. And as Chair of the Unger Advisory Committee, he serves as transition support for those released from prison this year. He serves to organize thousands of volunteers, inmates, and their families to advocate against "Life Means Life" policies, as well as for policies that are supportive of returning citizens, not punitive.

CONTACTwaltermandalalomax@hotmail.comBMe LEADERS BALTIMORE*LANCE LUCAS

Economic Opportunity, Education, Mentoring and Youth Development

Lance Lucas believes black males—and their talents beyond sports and entertainment—are "America's greatest secret."

Lance overcame homelessness and poverty by teaching himself how to operate and program computers. Today, he offers a youth mentorship program to future computer programmers and software engineers.

He is the Founder of Digit All Systems, a program that has partnered with more than 60 schools in the area. He facilitated the donation of over 3,500 computers to organizations and inner city schools in need and has trained more than 10,000 students in computer programming. His students and mentees have job offers from companies that include Verizon, Boeing, NSA, Constellation Energy, and Cyber Point.

BMe LEADERS BALTIMORELEDAMIEN MYERS

*Economic Opportunity; Health and Wellness;
Education; Mentoring and Youth Development*

LeDamien Myers reached his career goals and now gives young people the abilities to do the same.

LeDamien Myers, a former physician, left the medical community to help young people of color find opportunities as medical and health professionals. He established a biomedical program at Western High School and will expand the program to schools across the city.

LeDamien was raised by a teen mother who supported him in his journey to become the first male college graduate in four generations. Today, he inspires young people to pursue careers in Science, Technology, Engineering, and Math.

CONTACTlkmyers@bcps.k12.md.usBMe LEADERS BALTIMORE*CHRIS WILSON

Economic Opportunity

Chris Wilson is a force for economic opportunity in Baltimore despite being sentenced to life in prison.

As a 17-year-old, Chris Wilson was sentenced to life for murder. Today, he's a full-time scholarship student, director of workforce development for a community organization and owner of two social enterprises that employ marginalized local residents.

Chris provides local residents with the skills to meet the needs of the hiring community. He runs a community business school for local "below-market" entrepreneurs. Wilson also created a "low-tech" incubator for brick-and-mortar businesses that employ local residents.

BMe LEADERS DETROITGREG ANDERSON

Education, Mentoring and Youth Development

Greg Anderson teaches leaders to be mentors and teaches mentees to be builders of communities.

Greg Anderson, after serving a prison sentence for nine years, runs an after-school program called Project Next Level. The program is a proactive approach to preparing young people for the future demands of higher education, financial intelligence, and career readiness.

Greg believes it is his role to replicate models of mentorship and bring awareness to the role mentors play in strengthening the foundation of communities.

CONTACTraisethemupllc@gmail.comBMe LEADERS DETROIT*ODIS BELLINGER

Mentoring and Youth Development

Odis Bellinger goes beyond his place of worship to give young people strong father figures.

Odis Bellinger, a Detroit native, created the Male Responsibility Leadership Program in an effort to advance his volunteer outreach and support young men inside and outside his place of worship.

The program is a community-based support program used to develop the skills needed to help young men take charge of their lives. As part of the program, Odis conducts violence-prevention and anti-bullying workshops that empower young men—many of whom live in single-parent homes—with the tools to be inspirational role models and builders of communities.

BMe LEADERS DETROITLLOYD CREWS

Education, Mentoring and Youth Development

Dr. Lloyd Crews went from an unmotivated student to a highly effective student motivator.

Lloyd Crews, who grew up on the east side of Detroit and once struggled to motivate himself to complete school, is the Founder of the "Man Up" mentorship program at Oakland Community College.

"Man Up" is a 12-week service program for male high school students. The program motivates young black men to complete high school and transition into college life. Participants come to campus one day a week to complete a college course. Students also participate in seminars on personal finance, health & wellness, healthy relationships, diversity, career exploration and entrepreneurship.

CONTACTchenier01@gmail.comBMe LEADERS DETROIT*BRYANT GEORGE

Education, Mentoring and Youth Development

Bryant George went from being a student to being the force behind Madonna University's black male recruitment and retention.

Bryant George, a first-generation college graduate, is Founder and Director of the Bridging Lost Gaps (BLG) program. BLG serves to improve college enrollment, retention, and the graduation rates of African American male students at Madonna University.

The strategic recruitment and retention efforts encourage African American high school senior male students throughout their pursuit of a four-year degree. Bryant says it was support from a personal mentor in addition to academic support on-campus that helped him to become the first four-year graduate in his family. The structure of the BLG program offers students personal, financial, and academic support.

BMe LEADERS DETROITJACOB RAYFORD

Economic Opportunity, Mentoring and Youth Development

Jacob Rayford weaves together networks of Detroit natives and other entrepreneurs, foodies, and an occasional engineer.

Jacob "Jay" Rayford, an engineer and proud Detroit native, organizes networking opportunities that help to demystify the path to success. He is Founder of Social Sushi Detroit, a networking event that takes place downtown.

In an effort to create exposure for opportunity, Jay organizes network events to connect Detroit natives with opportunities for homegrown success. Rayford also organizes roundtable events and health awareness activities with Healthy Detroit and the Detroit Food Academy.

CONTACTsymbol313@gmail.comBMe LEADERS DETROIT*DARRYL REDMOND

Education, Mentoring and Youth Development

Darryl Redmond reaches teenagers through a powerful restorative justice practice called "listening to them."

Darryl Redmond, a Detroit native, facilitates restorative practice sessions at high schools in the city of Detroit. He believes conflicts are minimized when teenagers have an opportunity to express how they feel and communicate their situations.

He understands that young people are looking for someone who cares about them to listen. Darryl recognizes that few students were granted access to supportive families during this vulnerable life stage. He believes mentors like him have the opportunity to be the support young people need.

YOUSSEF KROMAH

Education, Mentoring and Youth Development

Youssef Kromah turns pain into poetry and gives young people the skills to cope and communicate.

When his best friend was murdered, Youssef Kromah used poetry as therapy. He now uses poetry to educate youth on how to use writing to develop their own voice and advocate for themselves.

Youssef has lost twelve of his closest friends to gun violence and the rest to incarceration. While he “made it out the hood,” he still dedicates his life to giving others a chance to do the same via the Writers Matter (WM) program. WM is a motivational strategy which encourages students to share their stories, listen to other voices, and develop interpersonal communication. The program fosters a nurturing environment, stronger teacher-student relationships, and effective classroom management.
