

Josh Creaser

2016 Young Environmentalist of the Year

Josh Creaser is 25 years old and lives in Canberra. Josh is 350.org Australia's Frontline Projects Coordinator and works on national campaigns aiming to stop the expansion of the coal and gas industry and support a rapid and fair transition to a fossil free energy system.

The current campaign focus for Josh is AGL Energy - Australia's biggest carbon polluter.

Josh studied environmental science and human ecology at the ANU, where he discovered the world of campaigning and activism.

He's been an active member of the 350.org Canberra group since its founding in 2013 and worked with that team of volunteers to secure a commitment from the ACT Government to divest from fossil fuels.

Josh supported mass action at the Leard Blockade at Maules Creek and was one of the core organisers for the People's Parliament in Dec 2015 when 300 people staged a sit in at Parliament House in Canberra, to coincide with the Paris Climate talks.

Josh instrumental in organising the visit by the Pacific Climate activists to Parliament in Canberra and the flotilla to the Break Free flotilla that shut down Newcastle coal port in early 2016.

Josh Creaser is available for interview on 0410 745 005
