Hello,

I am writing about my unique foothill community of Alta Loma, we are part of Rancho Cucamonga, but we really consider ourselves separate from much of the city. We have our own post office and zip codes, and our mail is delivered to 'Alta Loma', even on our city council our community makes up most of the First District. Our community is much more rural than the rest of the city or region. We have almost no apartments, our lot sizes are bigger and we interface directly with the national forests. Many in my community can remember the Grand Prix fire in 2003 that forced evacuations in my community and burned down and damaged many homes. That is why I believe it is critical our voice is joined with other rural communities so we can be heard.

I am also part of the local equestrian club. We work to maintain the equestrian trails in our city and our local park where our equestrian center is. I am concerned that putting our community with the rest of our city will mean we get put in a district with urban areas like Fontana or Ontario. Those communities don't share our concerns with maintaining our natural environment and are much more developed. South Rancho and Fontana have huge warehouses and are focused on logistics. We are also vastly different than the Los Angeles communities to our west.

I really feel that the commission should keep our community with other rural areas in San Bernardino County. Mountain communities like Lytle Creek, Wrightwood or Big Bear have more in common with us than even other parts of our own city. We all share a concern with the National Forests and we should have a say in the representative who impacts the forests.

Thank you,

Sandy Mora
