MESSAGE FROM THE CHAIRMAN AND PRESIDENT

Last year, we asked: Why do we have the Canadian Global Affairs Institute? Our raison d’être is to make sense of our complex world, and uncertainty is accelerating in the world around us. In 2017, we made significant strides to advance this mission statement.

In 2017, the Canadian Global Affairs Institute remained steadfast in its mission to inform Canadians, policymakers and the public alike about the international challenges confronting Canada. Our content library increased significantly as we produced 65 papers discussing a broad range of topics, including a series examining Canada’s energy and environment policies and policy options produced with the support of Natural Resources Canada. Our podcast continued to flourish as we released an additional 41 episodes. We also rebranded and redesigned our masthead magazine – now titled The Global Exchange – to be thematically organized and include more impactful articles, to provide greater value to our readership. Simply click on the links herein to peruse any of our content.

The Institute’s educational and stakeholder engagement programs also reached new heights. Three major conferences were held in Ottawa discussing Canada’s role in our changing world, Canada’s new defence policy and Canada’s defence procurement challenges. These conferences were complemented by numerous roundtables, seminars and other speaker engagement events.

Promoting informed discussion about Canada’s role in the world is today as important as ever. Whether interpreted as a blessing or curse, we irrefutably live in interesting times.

The inauguration of President Donald Trump and his pursuit of an America First agenda has eroded or threatened many international norms the U.S. has long championed. North Korea’s sixth nuclear weapon test and continued development of increasingly sophisticated long-range ballistic missiles are creating a time-sensitive powder keg on the peninsula. Ethnic conflict in Myanmar, famine and cholera epidemics in South Sudan and Yemen, the ongoing Syrian civil war, and a series of hurricanes that devastated the Caribbean and North American Gulf Coast have created millions of refugees and displaced at-risk people. The proliferation and volatility of cryptocurrencies and other developments in technology and technological processes are challenging the norms of our financial and economic system. These are some of the destabilizing events which contribute to international uncertainty.

These events have political consequences. In March, the United Kingdom invoked Article 50 of the Lisbon Treaty, formalizing its intent to withdraw from the European Union; at the 19th Chinese Communist Party Congress President Xi Jinping consolidated his position within his party and at the helm of China; and populist movements across the Western world challenged elections and unveiled fervent nationalist forces.

However, there were also reasons for optimism in 2017. In June, the city of Mosul was liberated after three years of brutal ISIS occupation as the extremist organization’s strength continued to diminish; centrist parties in major Western countries such as the Netherlands, France and Germany defeated nationalist movements; and global economic growth continued to increase from the year prior.

This is the international environment Canadian decision-makers must navigate.

In 2018, we will continue to diversify and enrich the mix and calibre of our programs. We have no doubt 2018 will prove to be another banner year in pursuit of the Institute’s vision. We want to thank all of our sponsors and supporters who afford us the opportunity to provide the best information to help guide Canadian international policy in these challenging times. We hope to earn your continued support in the years to come.
Since its creation in 2001, Calgary-based CGAI’s mission has been to promote Canada’s active and effective involvement in the international arena. The CGAI has pursued this mission through the production of authoritative, relevant and rigorous public policy analysis, and the dissemination of this strategic analysis to Canadian policy-makers and the public. We strive to be the indispensable institution that government, the media, business and civil society, here and abroad, seek out for policy analysis.

The media, private industry and the highest echelons of government regularly seek out the Institute’s expertise to provide analysis, guidance and advice. The CGAI’s ability to engage Canada’s most important decision-makers is our differentiator. By informing Canadian decision-makers, the Institute’s research acts as a catalyst for innovative global engagement and provides insights into international challenges and opportunities pertaining to defence, diplomacy, development, international trade and global governance.

In 2017, the CGAI conducted a wide array of activities in an effort to promote and foster informed non-partisan public dialogue regarding Canada’s national interests in global affairs. In all, the Institute published 65 papers, four editions of our rebranded magazine, The Global Exchange, and 41 podcasts. With the support of Natural Resources Canada, the Institute also published a series of papers examining Canada’s energy and environmental policies and policy options. In addition to our publications, the CGAI hosted two speaker series dinners in Calgary discussing Canada-U.S. trade relations and cyber-security. We also organized three conferences in Ottawa that examined Canada’s role in a world in disarray, Canada’s new defence policy – Strong, Secure, Engaged – and Canada’s defence procurement challenges. The Institute’s outreach via social media and traditional media channels also continued to grow.

These activities are the means the CGAI employs to achieve its principal aim of informing Canadian policy-makers and the Canadian public about Canada’s global future.
The Canadian Global Affairs Institute began in 2001 as the Canadian Defence & Foreign Affairs Institute (CDFAI) with a mandate to promote and inform government and the public about the value of a strong international Canadian presence. Our aim is the provision of insightful analysis and data regarding Canadian policy in all realms of global affairs – defence, development, diplomacy, security, international law, trade and natural resource management, and global governance. We achieve this by promoting and disseminating the policy options analysis produced by subject matter experts via conferences, publications and the media.

WHO WE ARE
The Institute’s research is created by a cadre of more than 70 fellows – a diverse group of practitioners and academics throughout Canada and abroad. Program guidance is provided by a 16-person advisory council made up of a cross-section of former politicians from Canadian federal parties, senior retired civil servants, retired general officers and academics. The Institute is governed by a board of six experienced corporate directors, while a lean staff of nine split between Calgary and Ottawa manages day-to-day operations.

WHAT DO WE DO
The Institute conducts research on current and critical international issues relevant to Canada. The Institute’s core activities include the production of written, audio and video publications, the hosting of speaker events and providing expert commentary to media.

We publish electronic policy papers and policy updates, a quarterly Global Exchange magazine and a series of weekly electronic bulletins. We have a comprehensive website and social media presence and provide subject matter expertise to the media. We also inform our target audiences through annual speaker series, speaker events, symposiums, and in concert with the University of Calgary’s Centre for Military, Security and Strategic Studies, we assist in providing an annual military journalism course.

VISION
The Institute’s vision is to become the indispensable Canadian institution that government, the media, business and civil society, here and abroad, seek out for policy analysis pertaining to global affairs.

MISSION
The Canadian Global Affairs Institute’s mission is to identify Canadian global interests and to promote Canada’s active and effective involvement in the international arena. We pursue this mission through the production of authoritative, relevant and rigorous public policy analysis, and the dissemination of this strategic analysis to Canadian policy-makers and the public. To succeed, it is imperative that we inform both decision-makers and the public of the connection between international affairs and the ongoing pursuit of a more secure and prosperous Canada.

POLICY PAPERS
In 2017, the Canadian Global Affairs Institute published 14 policy papers, including several in concert with our partner, the School of Public Policy (SPP) at the University of Calgary. All policy papers undergo a double-blind peer review process to ensure unbiased methodological and conceptual evaluation. The analysis and recommendations produced in these papers and the ideas they articulate are a key component of the CGAI’s work. Policy papers are longer, more in-depth bodies of work that afford some of our fellows a chance to thoroughly examine a topic, analyzing research and providing a recommended course of action.

POLICY UPDATES
Thirty-one policy updates were published in 2017. These topical papers are shorter than policy papers, allowing for timely response to the dynamic political environment. They are produced by our fellows, as well as staff and other subject matter experts. Similar to policy papers, policy updates are subject to rigorous review to ensure high quality research and analysis. However, because of their timely nature, they do not undergo a double-blind review. A wide range of topics are explored, reflective of the Institute’s breadth of expertise.

THE GLOBAL EXCHANGE MAGAZINE
The Global Exchange (formerly The Dispatch) is the Canadian Global Affairs Institute’s quarterly magazine featuring topical articles written by our fellows and other contributing experts. Each issue contains approximately a dozen articles exploring political and strategic challenges in international affairs and Canadian foreign and defence policy. In 2017, the magazine was redesigned and rebranded to provide greater value to our readership. Each issue now focuses on a central theme, and includes collections of articles for examining topics in greater depth than before. The new format was inaugurated with our 2017 Energy Series, and the following issue featured a collection of papers examining Canada’s role within the NATO alliance.

SPEAKER SERIES
For eight years, the CGAI has hosted an annual speaker series in Calgary. The speaker series comprises two to four dinner events each year, featuring prominent guest speakers who discuss current events and contemporary challenges in Canadian global affairs. John Weekes, a senior advisor with Bennett Jones and former Canadian chief trade negotiator, discussed the challenges of NAFTA renegotiations with President Donald Trump’s administration during our first event. The second dinner, featuring John Millar, president of Digital Boundary Group, focused on corporate and personal cybersecurity threats and mitigation methods.

January 24, 2017 – John Weekes, Senior Business Advisor, Bennett Jones LLP

February 21, 2017 – John Millar, President, Digital Boundary Group
CONFERENCES
The Canadian Global Affairs Institute hosted three conferences in 2017. These events are core components in the pursuit of the CGAI’s vision. By gathering prominent Canadian policy-makers, business leaders, academics and bureaucrats, the CGAI can convey and exchange ideas about Canada’s evolving role in the world as well as bolster debate and analysis of Canadian foreign policy options.

A World in Disarray: What Role for Canada?
May 2, 2017
On May 2, the CGAI hosted its annual policy symposium at the Chateau Laurier in Ottawa. This symposium is a key event in the CGAI’s mission to enhance Canada’s global role by stimulating awareness and debate about Canada’s international engagement among a diverse group of Canadian policy-makers, academics, business leaders and diplomatic guests.

Keynote Speakers:
- Diane Jacovella, Associate Deputy Minister of Foreign Affairs
- Kim Rudd, Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister of Natural Resources

The symposium featured five panels:
- What role and what goals for Canada in a confused international system? – moderated by Colin Robertson
- What does Canada want in renewing the North American economic accord? – moderated by Colin Robertson
- What is the best energy policy for Canada? – moderated by Kelly Ogle
- Evolving North American defence for the Trudeau-Trump era – moderated by Stephen Saideman
- Chronic condition? DND’s capital deferment problem – moderated by Thomas Ring

Unpacking Canada’s New Defence Policy: The Path to Strong, Secure, Engaged – Ottawa, October 4, 2017
Following the Trudeau government’s release of Canada’s new defence policy – Strong, Secure, Engaged – the Institute hosted a one-day conference at the Chateau Laurier to examine some of the major changes resulting from this new policy with experts from the government of Canada and non-governmental stakeholders. The conference focused on the changes proposed to the defence of Canada and North America, the new 20-year defence funding plan, Canada’s new defence capabilities and the creation of an innovative defence sector.

Keynote Speakers:
- Hon. Harjit Sajjan, Minister of National Defence
- Jody Thomas, Senior Associate Deputy Minister, Department of National Defence
- Rear Admiral Darren Hawco, Chief of Force Development, Department of National Defence

The symposium featured three panels:
- The evolution in North American defence policy – moderated by Lindsay Rodman
- Canada’s future defence funding – moderated by David Perry
- Creating an innovative defence sector: New IDEaS and approaches – moderated by Doug Dempster

Creating a Big Bang: Implementing the Procurement Ambition in Strong, Secure, Engaged – Ottawa, October 26, 2017
The fifth annual defence procurement conference focused on the core defence procurement challenge arising from Strong, Secure, Engaged implementation. How difficult will this ambition be to implement? How do we get there from here? Can the status quo procurement system (institutional arrangements, governance structure, capacity, skill levels, etc.) with planned adjustments deliver this new policy on schedule? The day’s program was constructed to examine three subjects that are of significant importance to delivering on these objectives: What are the government’s plans and how difficult will they be to achieve? What factors are critical for successful implementation?
implementation? How does Canada actually move forward to implement Strong, Secure, Engaged? Can Canada learn from best practices in other countries, or do we have to solve our issues in our own way?

Keynote Speaker: Mark Thomson, Senior Analyst, Australian Strategic Policy Institute. The symposium featured four panels:

- Setting the stage – moderated by David Perry
- Framing the challenge – moderated by Eugene Lang
- What factors are critical to successfully implementing SSE? – moderated by David Perry
- How does Canada actually move forward to implement SSE? – moderated by Michael Day

ROUNDTABLES AND SEMINARS
The Canadian Global Affairs Institute hosted and participated in 19 roundtables and seminars in 2017. The various roundtables and seminars featured CGAI fellows and guest speakers from diverse backgrounds, including Canadian military personnel and foreign attachés, diplomats, industry executives and visiting academics, and the topics of discussion were as diverse as the speakers. Similar to conferences, by gathering prominent stakeholders the CGAI can convey and exchange ideas about Canada’s evolving role in the world as well as bolster debate and analysis of Canadian foreign policy priorities, options and alternatives.

CANADIAN MILITARY JOURNALISM COURSE
Started in 2002, this nine-day course introduces university students to military journalism and the Canadian Armed Forces. The course includes a combination of media-military theory in a classroom setting, coupled with field visits to Armed Forces regular and reserve units. The program’s goal is to enhance the military education of future Canadian journalists who will report on Canadian military activities domestically and abroad. Through this education the media will become a better conduit to communicate defence and foreign affairs issues to the Canadian public. In 2017, 10 journalism students selected from all across Canada completed the course from April 30 - May 10, which included a visit to CFB Edmonton.
Excellence in public policy analysis alone would not allow the CGAI to succeed in its mission. To inform Canadians, the Institute must also effectively communicate policy options analysis to decision-makers and the Canadian public. In addition to hosting various events to directly engage with our target audience, the CGAI disseminates and promotes its publications via social media and traditional media channels. In recent years, the Institute’s presence in primary media channels has steadily grown. In 2017, CGAI fellows published 172 op-eds in online and print media outlets, conducted 491 online or print interviews, conducted 133 radio interviews and appeared in 162 television interviews.
MEDIA HITS

Since 2013, the CGAI has seen consistent growth in its media presence. Overall, total media hits – including written, radio and television – by CGAI fellows have grown from 290 in 2013 to 958 in 2017, representing a 330 per cent increase in five years and a 53 per cent increase from 2016. This success is by and large thanks to the efforts of Vice-President David Perry and Vice-President Colin Robertson. Their work in the capital region continues to enhance CGAI’s reputation and has enabled the CGAI to become and remain the primary source for expertise on many defence-, procurement- and trade policy-related issues in the media. The Institute’s growth of media visibility has also been aided by the 40 per cent expansion of the Institute’s cohort of fellows, from 50 to 70, within 2017.

SOCIAL MEDIA
In addition to traditional media, social media is an important tool for the CGAI to engage with its target audience. In 2017, the Institute’s following on Facebook, Twitter and LinkedIn increased, most notably having achieved a 33 per cent increase of followers on Twitter and a 17 per cent increase on LinkedIn.
OUR SUPPORTERS
The Canadian Global Affairs Institute wishes to thank its generous sponsors for supporting our 2017 events and projects. As a charitable non-profit organization, we depend on the generosity of our supporters to continue pursuing our vision and mission. We could not continue to produce non-partisan, unbiased and independent analysis of public policy options if it were not for our donors’ generous contributions, and in-kind support through collaboration with our partners. In addition to the individuals and organizations listed below, we would like to extend our thanks to those donors who prefer to remain anonymous, and who have partnered with, and contributed to, the CGAI in 2017.

Canadian Global Affairs Institute

The Canadian Global Affairs Institute focuses on the entire range of Canada’s international relations in all its forms— including (in partnership with the University of Calgary’s School of Public Policy), trade investment and international capacity building. Successor to the Canadian Defence and Foreign Affairs Institute (CDFAI, which was established in 2001), the Institute works to inform Canadians about the importance of having a respected and influential voice in those parts of the globe where Canada has significant interests due to trade and investment, origins of Canada’s population, geographic security (and especially security of North America in conjunction with the United States) or the peace and freedom of allied nations. The Institute aims to demonstrate to Canadians the importance of comprehensive foreign, defence and trade policies which both express our values and represent our interests.

The Institute was created to bridge the gap between what Canadians need to know about Canadian international activities and what they do know. Historically, Canadians have tended to look abroad in a search for markets because Canada depends heavily on foreign trade. In the modern post-Cold War world, however, global security and stability have become the bedrocks of global commerce and the free movement of people, goods and ideas across international boundaries. Canada has striven to open the world since the 1930s and was a driving factor behind the adoption of the main structures which underpin globalization, such as the International Monetary Fund, the World Bank, the International Trade Organization and emerging free trade networks connecting dozens of international economies. The Canadian Global Affairs Institute recognizes Canada’s contribution to a globalized world and aims to educate Canadians about Canada’s role in that process and the connection between globalization and security.

In all its activities the Institute is a charitable, non-partisan, non-advocacy organization that provides a platform for a variety of viewpoints. It is supported financially by the contributions of individuals, foundations and corporations. Conclusions or opinions expressed in Institute publications and programs are those of the author(s) and do not necessarily reflect the views of Institute staff, fellows, directors, advisors or any individuals or organizations that provide financial support to, or collaborate with, the Institute.
