A letter from the Vice-President Couple

As our world continues to confront this horrible pandemic, we as a nation also battle many new domestic challenges. As a Movement, we observe the political divisions that exist between us that have escalated to occurrences of rioting, an overall lack of respect toward one another, as well as contempt for those with conflicting beliefs. We also observe the ramifications the pandemic continues to impose on us . READ MORE.

Just add people!

We need to be creative to provide fellowship. People really want to get together if we can find ways that people are comfortable with. Here is a basic set-up for a CFM meeting in these unusual times. Michigan CFMers used a garage, opened windows on either side with a window fan for ventilation, used a couple of Mr. Heater propane indoor cabinet heaters and everyone wore masks when walking around. Everyone was comfortably warm and felt blessed to be able to gather. The group also provided blankets if anyone wanted them, but that night no one needed them.

Fall Clean-up : A Pleasant Action for Illinois CFMers

CFMers Helped with the Fall Cleanup in the landscaping around their church, Our Lady of the Wayside in Arlington Heights, IL. This “Autumn Action” took place because OLW parishioner Joe Farwell recognized a need to spruce up the gardens and asked for support from the parish’s active CFM groups. The parish leaders said, “We are grateful for our CFM members who responded and other parishioners who enthusiastically joined us. OLW patio, rectory space, church and school entrances look so much better and more welcoming!”

Groups Get Creative to Find Ways to Meet and Be CFM

The CFM groups at Queen of the Holy Rosary Parish in Bucyrus, Kansas are looking forward to resuming our regular meetings. At their recent meeting, ten people attended, and they spread out at five separate tables, set in a circle, in the school cafeteria. Leaders Kathy and Tom Rothermich explain, “We used to meet in each other’s houses, but we don’t know when that will happen again--hopefully some time in 2021! Our parish also has three other CFM groups of younger families and they have been meeting too.”
