COMMITMENT TO REFUSE MONEY FROM WEAPONS MAKERS

I commit to refusing campaign contributions over $200 from PACs, executives or organizations representing the top five weapons manufacturers: Lockheed Martin, Northrop Grumman, Raytheon, Boeing and General Dynamics. I also commit to refusing campaign contributions from the National Rifle Association.

As an elected official, I make critical decisions on issues related to national security and defense, from budget priorities to the use of military force. These decisions must be based on national security and moral principles, not on outside influences. I understand the possible conflict of interest in taking money from the NRA and the weapons companies that get large federal contracts and profit from conflict and the proliferation of weapons.

Making this commitment means that I will not knowingly accept any contributions from the NRA or from PACs, executives, or front groups of these weapons manufacturers.
