History
T.O.U.C.H Outreach was born out of the pure heart of its founder Muhammad Abdul Ahad in 2016. T.O.U.C.H Outreach works to transform community safety in Minneapolis, through a variety of strategies focused on youth development and community security. T.O.U.C.H Outreach provides expertise in the areas of: employment, mentoring, and youth services. T.O.U.C.H Outreach utilizes street patrols to build relationships and de-escalate conflicts before they lead to violence.

T.O.U.C.H Outreach team members and leadership are credible messengers for this work, as people who have experienced street violence directly and understand the impact that violence has on communities. They are trusted figures with strong relationships in the community, representative of the communities they are trying to reach both geographically and demographically. Most of the outreach workers last year were black men and women, with similar lived experience and therefore ability to understand where people are coming from. We were able to therefore support, protect, and intervene in situations where we understood the issues at hand and potential risks.

Community and Communications
T.O.U.C.H Outreach joins the City of Minneapolis in taking a public health approach to South Minneapolis violence prevention. Violence is a growing public health crisis in America and violence is a leading cause of death and disability which disproportionately affects youth, low-income populations, and people of color.

Because of the expertise and pre-established relationships between CNO, T.O.U.C.H Outreach and other area service providers, CNO violence interrupters led the way in connecting south Minneapolis residents to mental health resources, chemical dependency services, and other community-based organizations.

T.O.U.C.H Outreach is a part of the Blueprint Approved Institute (BPAI) through the City of Minneapolis, this supports the building of skills and capacity of our organization around grant writing and management, budgeting, evaluation and reporting, etc. Our founder is currently participating in this great training working to equip our organization for financial management and fiscal responsibility. While the Blueprint Approved Institute initiative is in the early stages right now, we look forward to the direct guidance from the City and peer to peer learning. With funding, through contracts with the City of Minneapolis, are allowing us to build up our services and grow the organization overall, including increasing our ability to secure other funds.
