

Courtney and I planned and prepared the 2020 Global Presidential Primary (GPP) Voting Center in Aachen together. I knew that she'd had no previous experience with the GPP, but it astonished me how quickly she grasped what needed to be done – and even more impressively – how well she was able to articulate that information to others. Also, when she came across something new or unclear, she asked good questions – the right questions.

Another important characteristic of a good event planner is organizational skills. She is one of the five members of the CNEC (Chapters Nominations and Elections Committee) which has been running the elections of Germany's 14 chapters, and she has proven herself to be a top-tier project manager and exceptional team player.

Courtney is also good with people. She is professional, but also polite and patient. She deals with difficult people and questions like a pro – better than almost anyone I have ever seen. This is extremely important when coordinating a team to get events set up and running. And when she needs assistance, she knows how to get a team of the right people together to get a task done.

Courtney has helped with the sale of merchandise and swag at different GOTV events, and she is eager to implement some new ideas on how to get even more “profit” out of the democratsabroad.org/germanyshop.

I've seen first-hand how Courtney works, and she will make a great Events and Fundraising Coordinator for DA-Germany.
