Community grants to make our roads safer

Duncan Pegg, Member for Stretton is urging community-based groups, schools and local government to apply for round six of the Queensland Government's Community Road Safety Grants when they open next week.

Mr Pegg said the latest round of the grass-roots grants program will open on Tuesday (18 April), with applications to be submitted by 26 May.

"The successful Community Road Safety Grants provides an opportunity for local people to address local issues and make a real difference to the safety of pedestrians and road users," he said.

"We need to do all we can to keep Queenslanders safe and community-based projects run by community members are a great way to do this.

"Grants are valued up to $20,000 for short-term, small-scale road safety projects and we encourage community-based groups to apply. They can also apply for funding of up to three years to deliver road safety education programs."
