

MY LIFE MY CHOICE

QUEENSLAND STATE ELECTION CANDIDATES' ATTITUDES TO VOLUNTARY ASSISTED DYING
19 OCTOBER 2020

VAD law reform hangs in the balance

STATEMENT BY THE MY LIFE MY CHOICE COALITION PARTNERS:

This report canvasses the results of a survey by the My Life My Choice coalition which attempted to record attitudes to voluntary assisted dying (VAD) law reform held by close to 600 candidates standing at the 31 October Queensland election.

Several factors mean the survey had a less than full response. We recognise that candidates can be inundated with surveys before elections. Candidates whose nominations were not known until at or close to the ECQ's deadline for nominations may not have had time to respond or have been difficult to contact.

Nevertheless, it is fair to draw the conclusion from the responses received at this time that the introduction of VAD laws in Queensland is far from certain.

The ratings applied to MPs and candidates were based on their response to two survey questions as well as any previous statements or actions in support of VAD law reform.

The lack of response from many candidates reinforces the central point being stressed by the My Life My Choice partners – that voters must satisfy themselves of the attitude to VAD by candidates standing in their local seat.

While some candidates have not and will not respond to surveys such as ours, it is harder for them to avoid discussion of this vital issue with voters.

So we continue to encourage Queenslanders who support VAD law reform to seek out candidates and ask for their views directly.

We also again make the point that it is too late after polls close for voters to discover that their MP for 2020-2024 will not support a VAD Bill.

The passage of any VAD Bill will depend on having a majority among 93 MPs willing to support safe and workable laws, and that prospect remains unclear.

So too does the likelihood of a VAD Bill even being debated.

The current Premier initiated the Health Committee Inquiry into VAD, referred its reform recommendations for VAD laws to the Queensland Law Reform Commission, and has said if re-elected she would put a VAD Bill to Parliament.

This shows strong support for VAD law reform and the right of Queenslanders to make their own choices on VAD.

No similar commitments have been made by the LNP leader whose official party platform opposes VAD.

While LNP MPs are likely to exercise a conscience vote on any VAD Bill, such a provision is meaningless if an LNP-led government does not submit a Bill to the Parliament.

The My Life My Choice coalition does not endorse or support any individual candidates or parties.

We have stressed to pro-VAD voters the need for them to What we asked.....

The My Life My Choice partners asked candidates two questions to determine the strength of their support for voluntary assisted dying.

QUESTION 1: Do you, as a matter of principle support the right of Queenslanders to have the choice of seeking access to a system of voluntary assisted dying under appropriate protections and safeguards, if they have a terminal illness or neurological condition causing them intolerable suffering?

QUESTION 2: Would you, as an MP in the Queensland Parliament ensure your vote on a VAD Bill reflects the wishes of your constituents?

We believe candidates should be able to answer these basic in-principle questions which do not rely on seeing any draft VAD Bill.

ensure their next state MP reflects their views.

However, we do wish to make the relevant point that if a VAD Bill is to be progressed it would be beneficial if the four MPs comprising the majority of the Health Committee Inquiry that recommended law reform were participants in any debate in the Queensland Parliament.

In particular, the knowledge of committee chair Aaron Harper MP (Thuringowa) who skilfully and sensitively navigated often emotional testimony to distil sound evidence for VAD laws, would be invaluable to any future debate. So too would the other Health Committee MPs who supported the majority findings: Joan Pease (Lytton); Michael Berkman (Maiwar); and Barry O'Rourke (Rockhampton).

Our belief in the value of having present in parliament MPs involved in an inquiry into matters of vital public policy is validated by an examination of the fate of the inquiry into palliative care conducted by the then Health Committee on the initiative of the Newman Government from June 2012 to May 2013.

That inquiry made more than 60 recommendations for improving palliative care yet few were implemented and the Harper Inquiry needed to revisit the subject as part of its inquiry into end-of-life issues.

Of the seven MPs who served on the 2012-2015 Health Committee, four were not returned at the 2015 election, yet their knowledge and advocacy may have made a difference to the fate of their inquiry's recommendations.

However, the future of all current sitting MPs rightly rests with voters.

Doctors for Assisted Dying Choice

The My Life My Choice coalition advocates for voluntary assisted dying law reform. It does not endorse any political party or candidate. Its dominant purpose at the time of the 2020 Queensland state election has been to encourage voters to find out for themselves where their local candidates stand on VAD.

COPYCAT RESPONSES FAIL TO REVEAL A POSITION

The rating of responses from candidates is based on a colour-coded system (at right).

Those providing unequivocal “yes/yes” answers to our two questions or a clearly positive answer with only slightly conditional language were assessed as being supporters or qualified supporters.

VAD opponents were those who provided clear “no/no” responses or whose qualified answers made their anti-VAD position clear.

We have earlier discussed the number of MPs and candidates who gave no response and the possible reasons.

It is unfortunate that their number included some known VAD supporters.

Of greater concern, and a matter of some disappointment, was the number of respondents who did not give a clear personal response but who relied on an answer consisting of a template form of words.

Many MPs or candidates running for the LNP and the Labor Party submitted responses provided by their party organisation that did not address the two very specific questions asked.

Despite the prospect of a conscience vote, it is clear many LNP MPs and candidates were content to adhere to a carbon-copy form of words reflecting their party’s anti-VAD platform.

Labor MPs or candidates who adhered to their version of a template response may similarly feel unable to commit publicly to a personal in-principle position.

As noted, these are both disappointing developments and sadly highlight voter assumptions about politicians being afraid to speak their minds.

The various template responses are provided below for the information of voters.

Most of those responses saw the MP or candidate concerned being classed as uncommitted or unclear.

As expected there was a variety of responses across all parties as VAD is a matter subject to a conscience vote.

The My Life My Choice coalition thanks all candidates who responded to our survey.

INDEPENDENTS UNAFRAID TO BACK VAD LAW REFORM

Independent candidates who responded to the My Life My Choice survey overwhelmingly backed VAD law reform.

Close to 70 independents have nominated for election and 22 responded to the My Life My Choice survey.

Of those, 19 were assessed as being a supporter or qualified supporter of VAD.

Current Independent Member for Noosa, Sandy Bolton, has pursued VAD law reform in her first term, in particular the need to enact VAD laws as soon as practicable.

In this election a number of other independent candidates have explicitly placed their support for VAD on the political agenda in their seats.

On the Gold Coast in the seat of Currumbin, Dr Richard Stuckey is running as an independent who supports VAD. He is attempting to capture the seat previously held by his wife Jann for the LNP from 2004 until her retirement this year. Mrs Stuckey was also a declared VAD supporter.

In the Redland Bay region the independent candidate for Oodgeroo, Claire Richardson, is attempting to take the seat from known anti-VAD MP, the LNP’s Dr Mark Robinson.

In the Wide Bay region, Loris Doessel is running as a pro-VAD independent in the seat of Callide against the LNP’s Colin Boyce who was first elected at the 2017 poll.

LABOR PARTY TEMPLATE RESPONSE....

The Palaszczuk Government, in November 2018, asked the Parliamentary Health, Communities, Disability Services and Domestic and Family Violence Prevention Committee to enquire into aged care, end-of-life and palliative care, including voluntary assisted dying.

This inquiry enabled Queenslanders to tell their personal stories and share their views.

In March 2020 the Committee tabled its ‘Aged care, end-of-life and palliative care’ report, making 77 recommendations and its ‘Voluntary Assisted Dying’ report, making 21 recommendations. A link to the report can be found here. The Government considers it vitally important that its final report to this Committee be fully informed by the views and experiences of aged care and palliative care providers.

Further, the sector and community need time to consider the reports in detail given the Committee has recommended draft legislation which closely aligns with the Victoria and Western Australian approaches.

Voluntary assisted dying is a very complex and deeply personal issue, in which competing interests and views of Queenslanders and experts have to be carefully balanced, and the lives of our elderly and most vulnerable people protected.

A decision has been made, as was done with the Termination of Pregnancy Bill, to refer the preparation of draft legislation to the Queensland Law Reform Commission. They will report back to the Attorney-General by the 1 March 2021 for government’s final consideration.

The way in which our government responds to these recommendations about reform to aged care, end-of-life and palliative care, and voluntary assisted dying is critical to ensuring the protection of our most vulnerable members of the community – it is critical we get this right.

Labor’s copycat answer merely gave a potted recent history of the VAD issue.

The LNP’s template focussed on palliative care despite clear evidence that it cannot address all end-of-life suffering.

LIBERAL NATIONAL PARTY TEMPLATE RESPONSE....

Thank you for your email in relation to the current Queensland Law Reform Commission review into voluntary assisted dying.

I certainly appreciate that the experience of watching a loved-one struggle and succumb to a terminal illness is confronting and heart wrenching.

The issue of voluntary assisted dying is one that polarises many parts of the community, with strong and sincerely held views on both sides of the argument.

Noting there is currently no bill before the Parliament or for consideration, our priority will be improving palliative care.

In relation to your specific questions, LNP Leader Deb Frecklington has previously acknowledged that matters of life and death are conscience votes as agreed to by the LNP party room.

This is a complex area of law that will need to be closely examined before any legislation was considered and voted on. It is not as simple as yes or no questions.

If I am elected to the Queensland Parliament I will always represent the views of my constituents, that is my role.
