

Bright future after streetlight work

HALLS Creek streets will be sunnier on all sides after an upgrade to its street lighting and building of a shared community pathway.

The Federal Government gave $100,000 to the Shire of Halls Creek for the projects.

Five local contractors were employed for the works. They included community street lights that have been upgraded and new ones installed, while new footpath access between the town centre and community housing has been built, with wheelchair access.

This was funded through the $1 billion Regional and Local Community Infrastructure Program.

20th bash aids charity

NICOLA KALMAR

BROOME'S Bankwest branch celebrated its 20th birthday last week by holding a charity bash.

To mark the occasion, staff hosted a sausage sizzle for the public with proceeds going to local charity Chelonia Wildlife Rehabilitation and Release.

Business banking manager Brendon Hunter said there was a big turnout and the team was thrilled to have supported Chelonia.

"The event was a great success. We wanted to support a local organisation and everyone is fond of animals so Chelonia was the obvious choice," he said.

Chelonia wildlife carer Lesley Baird attended the party with a few feathered friends including Ocky the tawny frogmouth.

"We don't receive any funding so we rely on public donations. It is really rewarding for Bankwest to sponsor us and we're grateful to everyone who supported this cause," she said.

Bankwest raised $500 from the sausage sizzle and matched this to offer Chelonia a total of $1000.

Business banking manager Brendon Hunter, Chelonia wildlife carer Lesley Baird and retail manager Renae McNamara with some feathered friends.

Mr Hunter said Bankwest was proud to serve the community for the past 20 years and was looking forward to reaching another milestone.

Rural and Regional state manager Michael Kettle was in charge of feeding guests and said the event was a great way to support local charities.

War on weeds in new campaign

DERBY and Fitzroy Crossing residents are declaring war on weeds as part of a new campaign initiated by Environs Kimberley and the Shire of Derby/West Kimberley with the assistance of the Wungurr rangers.

The campaign was launched with a set of brochures in Derby and Fitzroy Crossing mailboxes last week and is encouraging locals to remove introduced plants, which can be a threat to local plants and wildlife by taking over natural bushland.

Environs Kimberley West Kimberley nature project coordinator Louise Beames said the most problematic plants in the Derby and Broome areas were the neem tree, a fast growing tree which is popular around towns.
