Mary Rose Amaral Malpeque

Mary Rose Amaral (she/her) discovered her love of politics through taking law classes when she attended high school. She is currently in school at Ryerson University, majoring in Politics and Governance. Throughout her short time in University, she has taken the initiative to be civically engaged and take on leadership roles. In her first year of University, Mary Rose worked with Ryerson Votes, a project on Ryerson's Campus that aimed to increase the on-campus student vote in the 2019 federal election. In her time with Ryerson Votes, Mary Rose educated students on how to vote on campus, increasing political engagement on campus. In her first year Mary Rose took on a leadership role on campus by being elected as Vice President of Events at Ryerson Women in Law (RWIL). RWIL aims to help women and members of the LGBTQ+ community in their endeavours when pursuing a career in the legal sector. Outside of Ryerson, Mary Rose participated in the 2020 Ontario Model Parliament where she debated in the Ontario Legislature and helped write a Bill with her party. Since the eruption of COVID-19, Mary Rose has been volunteering with her riding's Liberal Riding Association as she aspires to one day work with the Liberal party. Some issues Mary Rose cares about are the Climate Change, economic equity, Women's Issues, and Indigenous issues within Canada. She is extremely grateful for the opportunity provided by Equal Voice and is excited to be representing Malpeque and learning from her peers across Canada.

Emma Drake

Charlottetown

Hello bonjour! My name is Emma Drake, and I am from Prince Edward Island. I am currently a student at UPEI, studying a Bachelor of Arts in Political Science. Additionally, I am currently the Elections Office Coordinator with Elections PEI. I have a passion for intersectional feminism and good public policy in all forms. To that effect, I am the co-host, writer, researcher, and producer of the podcast Dialogue with Drake and Daboo. Dialogue covers all things policy, politics, and pop-culture. I love discussing and learning about different policies, and how they are impacted by and intersect with politics, government relations, and even pop-culture. Additionally, I am the Chair of the PEI Coalition for Women in Government Board and Steering Committee. As a non-profit, non-partisan, intersectional feminist organization, the Coalition for Women in Government works to ensure representation in the municipal and provincial levels of government are as diverse as the PEI population by addressing structural and systemic barriers. I first started my professional work in policy as Vice President and President of the UPEI Student Union. I now continue my passion for policy with my roles at the Coalition for Women in Government and Elections PEI.

Emily Miller

Cardigan

My name is Emily Miller. I am from St. Peter's Bay, Prince Edward Island, the traditional and unceded territory of the Mi'kmaq. I am representing the riding of Cardigan. I am a graduate of St. Thomas University where I completed a Double Honours in Human Rights and International Relations. I have been involved in campaigns advocating for environmental rights and basic income, teaching English to newcomers, and been a member of Global Brigades where my university chapter partnered with rural communities in rural Honduras to work on community development projects.
