Dear Congressman Gutiérrez, Congresswoman Bass and Congresswoman Chu:

We, the undersigned, representing 121 organizations committed to improving the lives of children in the United States, thank you for your leadership in sponsoring the Children's Bill of Rights House Resolution. The Children's Bill of Rights is an important step forward in federal recognition that children are entitled to basic rights and protections that promote their physical, social, and emotional well-being. In addition, it promotes access to education and other opportunities that enhance their life skills to ensure the healthy development of all children in the United States.

Currently, there is no comprehensive federal framework that guarantees the rights of children in the United States. Laws are applied unevenly across states and local jurisdictions, meaning children are often sidelined in budget and policy priorities because they don't have a voice in the system. Despite representing over 22% of the U.S. population, children's programs only account for less than 8% of federal spending. In 2014, 1,640 children died due to abuse and neglect; 19.9% of children lived in poverty; and 8.58 million children lived in households that were food insecure in the United States. More must be done to ensure that the basic rights of children are met so they can thrive and have the tools for success.

This Children's Bill of Rights covers a number of important provisions that create a benchmark for what children are entitled to and promotes the best interest of the child standard across issue areas. The provisions include:

- Ensuring that children's basic needs (shelter, clothing, food) are met;
- Protection from abuse and/or neglect, access to medical treatment;
- Educational supports and opportunities;
- Representation by attorneys and child advocates in legal proceedings;
- Prioritizing and developing healthy attachments with parents or other caregivers;
- Rehabilitative services if detained or incarcerated and protections from unsafe labor practices.

These rights are critical for children and should be recognized as such across the United States.

We thank you for your leadership in introducing the Children's Bill of Rights Resolution and look forward to working with you as you work to pass this important legislation. Should you have any questions regarding this letter, please contact Rricha Mathur at (202) 999-4852 or at r-richam@firstfocus.org.
