In February, we released our 2018 Impact Report, which reviewed our collective accomplishments as a network working to end homelessness and sets the groundwork for our efforts in 2019. In this month’s Member News, we are sharing a few highlights of what Funders Together did in 2018 to advance racial equity in the movement to end homelessness:

- We helped members learn. Our racial equity programming and technical assistance included: a webinar series with Race Matters Institute, a webinar on the SPARC Phase One Study findings, the creation of a racial equity resource page, and conversations with our members about operationalizing racial equity. We also developed a two-year community of practice focused on racial equity in homelessness, Foundations for Racial Equity, which kicked off this January. You can read reflections from the community’s first convening this past month on our blog.

- We supported our partners and the field. We provided guidance and feedback on the USICH Strategic Plan: Home. Together and how it could incorporate racial disparities and equity. Funders Together also presented at seven partner convenings talking about racial equity and racial disparities in housing.

- We deepened our internal learning. Funders Together staff and board participated in internal learning around racial equity and structural racism through trainings with ABFE, a Philanthropic Partnership for Black Communities, facilitation on racial justice with Interaction Institute for Social Change, reading Richard Rothstein’s Color of Law, and attending the Facing Race conference in Detroit.

Event Recording: 2019 Funders Forum Keynote Dr. Tiffany Manuel
At our 2019 Funders Forum, Dr. Tiffany Manuel spoke to attendees about how philanthropy can make a case to build both public and political will around unsheltered homelessness.

Webinar Recording: Removing Legal Barriers for Youth Experiencing Homelessness
In this webinar, we explored the importance of eliminating obstacles and increasing legal services for this population. We discussed how funders can support this important work to help remove barriers for youth seeking to secure identification, school enrollment, housing, employment, and much more. Casey Trupin, JD from Raikes Foundation moderated a panel of representatives from the American Bar Association, Equal Justice Works, the Family and Youth Service Bureau, and Homeless Persons Representation Project.

Webinar Recording: Home Together - The Federal Strategic Plan to Prevent and End Homelessness
In March, this webinar focused on the federal goals and strategies to end homelessness across the country, areas of increased focus in the new plan, and what funders should be aware of. We heard from Lindsay Knots, Policy Director at USICH, and Beverley Ebersold, Director of National Initiatives, about the plan and segue into a conversation about the implications for local communities and what funders can do to be good partners in the work to end homelessness.
