

Suzanne Reeds
for
Glen Gardner Borough Council

Suzanne is a transplant from Southern California where she worked in entertainment business management. When a strike that affected the acting community made life in Los Angeles difficult, Suzanne and her actor/husband Robin Haynes, along with their two young children, made the tough move to the East Coast. Suzanne worked on Wall Street for seven long years before being hired at the Hunterdon County Democrat where she was the paper's Religion Editor. It was that experience that inspired her return to school in 2004 where she spent four years on the campus of Randolph-Macon Woman's College (Lynchburg, Va.) studying Religion and Philosophy, both with an emphasis on Ethics.

Suzanne now works part-time at Shoprite in Clinton in bookkeeping and customer service which gives her the opportunity to stay close to home and in touch with her Glen Gardner community.

Suzanne and Robin have lived in Glen Gardner since 1988, and have come to love the town. They raised their two children there and now have two grandchildren who love to visit their grandparents and play in the streams, take nature walks, and top off the day at Dairy Queen.
