IMPACT “Mad Libs” 1

As you patiently wait in line at _____, responsibly (name of grocery store)
respecting social distance, a person approaches and stands very close to you. They are wearing a _____ and they smell (adjective) (article of clothing)
like (plural noun). “(favorite pick up line)” they say to you, leaning in even closer.

You take a breath - but not too big, because of the smell, and say “Please _____ and take a few steps back – I am practicing social (verb)
distancing!”

“Hey, I’m just being _____. You’re just so _____ and (adjective) (complimentary adjective)
I just wanted to get to know you,” they say. And even though your facial expression and body language are clearly saying “I AM NOT INTERESTED”, they keep on talking. “Has anyone ever told you that you look like _____?” they ask, as they begin to _____ and (name of celebrity) (type of dance) gesture for you to join in.

“I already said, BACK UP” you say calmly, but getting louder and more _____ to attract the attention of _____. “You are too (adjective) (plural noun)
close to me, BACK UP” you repeat, flashing your palms at them and looking around to assess the situation. You notice a store employee walking towards you. You look at the employee and say “This _____ (noun- animal)
is bothering me, can you please _____?”
(verb)

“Hey don’t get all _____, I was just trying to be nice!” the (adjective)
annoying person says. “I wouldn’t have tried if I knew you were such a

_____!”
(insulting name)

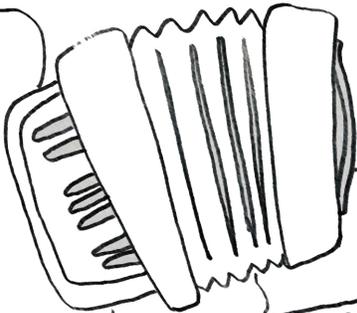

You take a breath to _____ your adrenaline and remember that (verb)
your goal is to keep yourself safe, not to come up with a better insult. “I don’t want any trouble, just back up,” you say. “This _____ employee (adjective)
is here to help, so if you leave now, we can all get our _____ and (plural noun)
be on our way.”

They look nervous as the employee approaches and gives them a stern look, then backs away from you and leaves. “Are you ok?” the employee asks? “Some _____ just can’t respect boundaries! Amirite?”
