Save Kingston's A&E and Maternity

Lib Dem MPs Edward Davey & Nick Clegg both have young sons born at Kingston Hospital

The evidence of the threat to key health services at Kingston Hospital is now widely accepted by health campaigners outside the political parties, including the British Medical Association and Unison. For some reason the local Conservative and Labour parties have joined forces and rejected this clear evidence.

While the NHS claims "it is early days" in their review of South West London hospitals, their own timetable suggests a public consultation on closure of major hospital services later this year. Moreover, documents I've been sent and now put on our website suggest work on this review had begun in secret at least by June 2009, if not before.

I believe we can stop these closures, as Kingston is a high performing hospital - ranked London's best district hospital by the independent analysts, Dr Foster. It would be a scandal to waste the investment both in A&E and maternity we have won over the last 14 years. But we need to build a huge campaign now.

Save Kingston Hospital

My local work since December has been dominated by the fight to save vital services at Kingston Hospital, including the Maternity Unit and Accident and Emergency.

I could hardly believe it when I was briefed by 4 local NHS Chief Executives and a senior clinician about this threat before Christmas.

To me it is simply unthinkable that anyone could contemplate closing these services, but internal NHS documents leaked to Susan Kramer MP and myself confirm that of 18 options now being considered, 6 would see Kingston Hospital lose A&E, Maternity and inpatient paediatrics - and in 16 of the 18 options Kingston Hospital loses at least one major service.

MP Edward Davey launches the campaign to save Kingston's A&E and Maternity Unit, backed by Liberal Democrat Leader, Nick Clegg MP

Edward Davey MP - Working For You

WINNING FOR LOCAL PEOPLE

We saved New Malden's south exit from being bricked up, but where are SWT's inspectors to justify the gates?

Air pollution at Tolworth's roundabout got me involved in a wider campaign to improve London's air quality

I visited Ashkelon and Gaza to see the effect of the conflict and spoke out for more humanitarian aid

Campaigning on local things that make a difference to our community remained a priority last year.

I learnt in late July that South West Trains wanted to brick up the south exit to New Malden station.

Whilst we stopped them, the campaigning on this continues, as their compromise gates are ugly and need to be open longer.

Helping local families in Chessington and Hook win their campaign for a new school bus for local pupils attending Hinchley Wood was a highlight.

My work to improve local air quality in Tolworth contributed to the start of legal action to force both Government and London's Mayor to take this environmental and public health issue seriously.

A STRONG VOICE IN PARLIAMENT

As the Liberal Democrats' Shadow Foreign Secretary, I led successful efforts to force Gordon Brown to appear before the Iraq War Inquiry and spoke regularly on Afghanistan and Sri Lanka.

I worked hard with Transport Ministers on the re-zoning of Kingston and Surbiton stations. I'm about to meet Lord Adonis again on this - and the failure to have commuter trains using Waterloo's former Eurostar platforms, as promised.

In Parliament.....

Since being re-elected in 2005, I have voted in 66% of divisions, a better record than more than 60% of Conservative MPs.

Last year, I voted FOR an early General Election, for Parliament to set the Iraq Inquiry's terms and for a referendum on electoral reform. I voted AGAINST the low level of grants to councils, the length of Parliament's summer recess 2009 and plans to allow business rate supplements without a vote.

Hinchley Wood School pupils from Chessington and Hook will now have a school bus - safer, quicker and greener.

Motions, speeches and questions

In the last 9 months, Edward signed over 200 Commons motions, backing, for example:

- Greater legal protections for garden land from development
- The Centenary of Girlguiding UK
- Support for Holocaust Memorial Day
- Better dementia care in hospitals

Edward spoke more often and asked more questions than the average MP, on subjects like:

- Threats to Kingston Hospital
- Changing NATO's Afghanistan strategy
- The future of local radio
- The UK's use of European Arrest Warrants, to fight serious crime

Taking my campaign to re-zone Kingston and Surbiton train stations to the top

WINNING FOR CHILDREN & STUDENTS

I attended my 14th consecutive Kingston University Freshers' Fayre. You can probably tell!

Kingston University is playing an even bigger role in sustaining our local economy - for example, I worked with staff and students providing special support for local professionals and executives who had lost their job in the recession, in partnership with Kingston's Chamber of Commerce. I'm backing a new campaign by the students to improve the sports facilities of the university.

A night shift with local police - in the town and across the Borough

Local people value the extra police now on Kingston's streets. I'm convinced high visibility, community policing has been key to cutting crime locally, with Kingston now London's safest borough. Yet we cannot be complacent - as London's Conservative Mayor's budget has slashed the police budget, with a reduction of 455 in police officers across the capital.

Salary and Expenses 2008/09*

* last full year available. For 09/10, figures go on the website as soon as they are audited.

I was in the bottom 50% of MPs for expenses again - as I do not claim for a second home and commute by train. I did not have to repay any past claims.

Salary (with London weighting)	£66,207	Travel	£2,299
Office Costs	£25,179	Communications & postage	£14,121
Staff costs	£99,674

Winning £8.2 million for extra primary school places in Kingston was last year's highlight. This new investment should prevent a return to the bad old days when Kingston's primary schools had the largest class sizes in the country under the Conservatives.

I supported the campaign to win the £30 million for a new secondary school in north Kingston led by Susan Kramer MP and local Liberal Democrat councillors. The only down side of that victory is that the upfront investment Kingston Council must make for the £30 million prevented the freezing of council tax I argued for.

The new Moor Lane Centre in Chessington should improve services for disabled children and their families

BACKING KINGSTON'S POLICE

Surbiton's St.Andrew's and St.Mark's pupils enjoy the photo opportunity

Opening the council's new centre for disabled children and their families in Chessington was a special thrill. It's a "one stop shop" idea - so that families can get the education, health and other help they need, all on one site. Parents of local disabled children have campaigned for this for over a decade.

Shall we bid for the Winter Olympics?

NOT A GOOD SKIER....

As I'd never skied before, attaching two ice blocks to my feet for Surbiton's Ski Sunday was not a wise decision. The cash for Shooting Star Children's Hospice was compensation, for one of the slowest times recorded!
