for Policy Committee

Who am I?

Hello! I'm Becky, I live in London. I have just graduated (joint honours Art History and English Literature) from university where I was Secretary of the University Lib Dems. In this role I drove forward my committee in delivering results, which I will do again on policy committee. I am proud to support the Rebuild slate, and can't wait to get started.

Why am I running?

I want to give policy committee an authentic and instinctively liberal voice. I want us to create policies which emotionally resonate with young people. Sometimes we're a party that thinks too much about policy as we see it, and not as the public will see it.

I want to be part of a policy committee writing motions on issues that matter in a credible way. That includes slimming down our policy output, and producing more, higher quality, thought-provoking policies which the party will take seriously. Recent years have shown some stunning examples of this, for example in the young carers motion.

Finally, I want to consult more widely with our membership about the directions of our policy – the appearance of YL as insular is not helped when tiny conferences claim to speak for all our young members. Whilst practically speaking not everybody can be involved, we can make sure we're writing policies on the issues we know matter to our members.

There was not a single mention of young liberals, or youth involvement, in the Thornhill Report. We need to make ourselves relevant to the party.

For Policy Committee

My Action Plan

1. Focus on issues relevant to young people
2. Consult our wider membership.
3. Ensure our policies are always distinctly liberal
