

Living Wage for Families Campaign Terms of Reference: Advisory Committee Member

About us

Our goal is for every working British Columbian to make a living wage.

The Living Wage for Families Campaign calculates the Living Wage for communities across BC, certifies employers that pay a living wage to their staff and contractors, and advocates for complementary government policies that would help families make ends meet.

New Advisory Committee members

We are looking for individuals who are passionate about ensuring every British Columbian earns a Living Wage to join the Campaign Advisory Committee.

In particular, we are looking for new Advisory Committee members who have experience of the issues the Living Wage for Families Campaign works on, either as a low-wage worker or as an employer.

We strongly encourage and welcome applications from diverse backgrounds and equity seeking groups.

Benefits of joining our Advisory Committee

- ✓ Help shape an exciting campaign that is successfully engaging workers and employers to end working poverty in British Columbia
- ✓ An opportunity to develop leadership and capacity building skills
- ✓ Receive honoraria for attending meetings (as requested).

Role of Advisory Committee Members

- Assist in developing campaign priorities, strategies, targets and actions.
- Assist in the selection of the staff campaign organizer.
- Guide and support the work of the staff campaign organizer and other staff and volunteers.
- Connect the campaign with represented constituencies and other contacts for the purposes of mobilizing greater support for campaign objectives and actions.
- Assist in developing criteria and procedures for recognition of living wage employers and positive employment practices.
- Support fundraising efforts for the campaign.

Commitment

- Advisory committee meetings are held every two months. They typically last 90 minutes.
