What you can do about climate change

LOWELL --Join us for a conversation at the Lowell Senior Center on July 10 from 10-11:30 a.m. about how to make sense of what is happening with the climate and steps you can take as an individual or group to avoid some of the worst consequences of global warming.

The conversation will be led by Hinda Blum and Dr. Grady McGonagill, members of the Massachusetts chapter of the non-profit, non-partisan Elders Climate Action (ECA). ECA is dedicated to mobilizing seniors to create the political will to address climate change while there is still time to preserve a livable climate for future generations.

Carol Oldham of Massachusetts Climate Action Network, in partnership with ECA, will be present to help identify specific actions seniors can take to effect energy policies and practices in Lowell.

You will receive handouts suggesting what you can do specifically. You will have opportunities to ask questions.
