Foreign aid groups believe there is finally some good news on the horizon after a bipartisan parliamentary report called for Australia’s aid budget to be boosted over the next decade.
The Joint Standing Committee on Foreign Affairs, Defence and Trade recommended the federal government, within a year, commit to a set timeframe of no more than five years for increasing Australia’s aid funding to at least 0.5 per cent of gross national income (GNI).

The committee also said a second timeframe should be set for increasing Australia’s aid budget to at least 0.7 per cent of GNI within 10 years.

This report follows a disappointing federal budget for foreign aid, which saw Australia’s aid investment fall from $5 billion in 2013/14 to $4 billion in 2019/20 – just 0.21 per cent of GNI. This will drop to 0.19 per cent in 2021/22.

Micah Australia executive director Tim Costello welcomed the report.
After another devastating blow to the aid budget this week, there is finally some good news on the horizon, Costello said.

“This report shows that politicians on both sides clearly know the right way forward for our aid program and have recognised that a serious injustice has been done to the aid budget over the past few years.”

The committee’s report into Australia’s aid program in the Indo-Pacific said there should be a legislated floor for aid funding of 0.5 per cent within five years and 0.7 per cent within 10 years.

The report also recommended the government raise public awareness about the benefits of Australia’s aid program.

Costello said this was a rare case of bipartisanship on aid, and called on both Prime Minister Scott Morrison and opposition leader Bill Shorten to back the report.

“As this report details, good, long-term development requires stability and predictability in funding. But each year the sector experiences a ‘merry-go-round’, wondering whether there will be cuts or not,” he said.

“We need proper bipartisan agreement and a clear way forward, and I will be advocating strongly for this.”

The Australian Council for International Development also welcomed the report. CEO Marc Purcell told Pro Bono News after the bitter blow of another aid funding drop in the budget, this report was a “welcome bolt from the blue”.

He said the report was the realisation of what a strategic, predictable and principled aid program could look like, but warned a political will to achieve it was still needed.

“If the committee’s proposals were implemented, this would be a huge leap forward in making Australia a partner of choice, a good neighbour and a respected global citizen,” Purcell said.

“Reaching 0.5 per cent within five years and 0.7 per cent by 2030 – combined with legislative floors – would mean Australia could turn its back on the damaging cuts in recent years and the running-down of our bilateral relationships in Asia, as well as our global reputation.”

Foreign Affairs and Aid Sub-Committee chair Chris Crewther MP, said that the committee identified a need to strengthen Australians’ confidence in the aid program.

“Australia has the capacity to do more, but the support of the Australian people is critical,” Crewther said.

“The committee hopes that the aid program can be better understood, not as a one-way street, but as a partnership that benefits Australia and our partner countries.
"With stability and certainty in the aid budget, and a renewed focus on effectiveness, Australia’s aid program can continue to build on its record of achievements."

Luke Michael is a journalist at Pro Bono News covering the social sector.

Tweets by @ProBonoNews

Australian businesses are increasingly open to adopting shared value practices within the workplace but are still grappling with how to implement it effectively, new @sharedvalueaust research says. bit.ly/2Ip4Ogm

Despite nearly 40 per cent of Australian clothing companies cleaning up their ethical act from the year before, only 5 per cent pay their factory workers a living wage, an annual report has revealed. bit.ly/2Ipo2SL

Got a story to share?

Got a news tip or article idea for Pro Bono News? Or perhaps you would like to write an article and join a growing community of sector leaders sharing their thoughts and analysis with Pro Bono News.
Tags: ACFID (/news/tags/?q=acfid), Foreign Aid (/news/tags/?q=foreign-aid), Marc Purcell (/news/tags/?q=marc-purcell), Micah Australia (/news/tags/?q=micah-australia), Tim Costello (/news/tags/?q=tim-costello),
‘Bolt from the blue’: Sector welcomes bipartisan support for foreign aid | PBA

YOU MAY ALSO LIKE

Foreign aid ‘treated like an ATM'

Wendy Williams

Wednesday, 3rd April 2019 at 12:28 pm
‘Bolt from the blue’: Sector welcomes bipartisan support for foreign aid | PBA

Sector slams ‘haphazard’ approach to budget lock-up

Luke Michael
Friday, 29th March 2019 at 4:20 pm

Budget Boost Promised for Avoidable Blindness in Pacific

Maggie Coggan
Wednesday, 13th March 2019 at 5:36 pm
‘Bolt from the blue’: Sector welcomes bipartisan support for foreign aid

It takes a village to help kids succeed in education

Disability groups call for conflicting commissioners to step down
Providers slam government’s NDIS workforce strategy

Luke Michael

Wednesday, 27th March 2019 at 4:35 pm

Advocates fight plan to use surplus NDIS funds to boost budget

Luke Michael

Thursday, 28th March 2019 at 4:55 pm
Advocates ask, why are NDIS funds not being used to fix the scheme?

Luke Michael

Wednesday, 3rd April 2019 at 12:19 pm