Dear Colleagues,

This summer we will be voting to decide who represents our members on Labour's National Policy Forum. Therefore I am writing to ask for your CLP's nomination for one of the London Region places. The nominations deadline is Friday 22 June 2018.

A little bit about me: I joined the Labour party at a young age, and since then have worked tirelessly to engage my local community and young Labour members. Being a human rights activist all my life, I have campaigned for equality and fairness on behalf of those who have often been overlooked. I have organised many events at my university addressing human rights crisis, in particular those surrounding women, rights of workers and ethnic minorities. Labour's 2017 manifesto – For the many not the few – showed labour's strong commitment for creating safer communities for all, and I want to take this further and help Labour execute its commitment to an even more equal and safer community.

Strength in numbers: It is vital that all our members are engaged in the policy process; I would work tirelessly to make sure our party is accessible and transparent for all members. I want to expand on Labour's current manifesto to ensure we create a community that is fair and just, and reflects the voices of its diverse citizens. Therefore the NPF must reflect this, and I will work to make sure we are incorporating the views of all our members.

Policy for all: I want to help Labour empower local communities and allow them to deliver the best to their residents; it is vital that any future planning in local communities puts the people and the community first –

I am committed to making sure we are a progressive society and party that has no place for racism, anti-Semitism, homophobia and Islamophobia. I want to contribute my enthusiasm and expertise to ensure that the Labour party is committed to produce legislation that is beneficial for all citizens. I want to campaign with Labour to make sure racism and hate crimes are eradicated and ensure minorities feel supported all the time.

We are proud of what we achieved in 2017, but our work does not stop here! Together we must continue to create a democratic, inclusive and fair process, to engage and inspire members. Therefore I seek your nomination to ensure that I am able to voice your view!

Thank you for your time.
