2018 PARTNERS
Money Smart Week is a public education campaign that helps consumers better manage their personal finances through thousands of free programs and events. These sessions are provided by Money Smart Week partners including nonprofits, financial institutions, government agencies, schools and libraries. Classes and events (offered April 21st – 28th) connected community members with resources that strengthened public-private partnerships and engaged the media. The Federal Reserve Bank of Chicago convenes the program to help consumers locate and use resources that will help them analyze spending, manage debt, build savings and plan for the future.

“Money Smart Week helps people from all backgrounds build financial capability. When consumers learn how to best save, spend, plan, and invest, they can take steps toward securing their financial futures. A community of well-informed consumers helps support a healthy economy.”

– Charles L. Evans, President & CEO, Federal Reserve Bank of Chicago

WHERE DID MSW 2018 TAKE PLACE?

What began in 2002 as a Chicago-based effort with 40 events and 30 partners has expanded to multiple states.

During Money Smart Week 2018, groups across the country worked together to reach consumers with information and ideas to encourage financial well-being. Topics presented included understanding stocks and bonds, how to read a credit report and planning for college. The goal of the program is to build financial capability, especially for some of the 73 million American adults who report that they are just getting by.

"Adults choose to come to these events when they have a need. They specifically choose a topic because they want that information. If they can get a strategy to meet that need, there’s a good chance they’re going to use it."

– Karen Chan, CFP®, Karen Chan Financial Education & Consulting, MSW Partner

FemPreneur Summit in Lavonia, Michigan, where women discover tips to build their businesses.

"Over the past 10 years, we’ve attended events that have brought us through retirement planning to estate planning. We’ve implemented knowledge gained from these engaging events to help make the best financial decisions for our family."

– Carol and Phil Battaglia, Money Smart Week® attendees
The Money Smart Week® campaign has grown to include thousands of Money Smart Week® partner organizations. These partners provide free sessions and events that help consumers manage challenges across the financial lifecycle. This year, more than 141,000 people attended events thanks to the efforts of our 2,500+ partners.

“Money Smart Week grows a strong community because you’re supporting everybody’s interests.”

FOSTERING COLLABORATION

Money Smart Week® brings together a diverse group of volunteers working together to strengthen their communities by encouraging participants to become more money-savvy and to use financial services effectively. Empowered consumers are able to make informed choices, use services that are of value to them and have greater control over their financial lives.

“It’s about uncovering needs, identifying resources, and then creating innovative programming. Money Smart Week® brokers relationships across diverse sectors and encourages collaboration leading to a maximum positive impact for all involved. We’re more powerful together.”

— Kelly Masters, State Chair, Money Smart Week® Michigan

In 2018, Money Smart Week® increased outreach to students. High schoolers in 65 classrooms played Cache!, a fun online game that instilled important financial lessons. College students engaged in GeoCache for College Cash, a virtual scavenger hunt featuring personal finance information every student should know.

“We have a presence on campus to help students better manage their money. Today, 70% of college students graduate with a significant amount of debt. When they graduate, the average student borrower owes more than $37,000. We’re working collectively to help students understand the math behind debt and the importance of building good credit.”

— Amy Bickers, Assistant Vice President, Federal Reserve Bank of Chicago

Money Smart Week® 2018 engaged youth in building healthy financial habits. The Money Smart Week® Kids Read initiative, piloted this year, provided 20,000 free copies of Those Shoes, by Maribeth Boelts. Sponsor Ally Financial also provided copies of Planet Zeee and the Money Tree, by Eric Esquivel and Jeremy Townsend. This program promoted fun ways for children and caregivers to establish the building blocks of saving and goal setting through story time at a local library. Local Money Smart Week Kid competitions engaged students in critical thinking and solving real-life financial issues.

“I have seen my peers struggle with the topic of personal finance. When one of us gets involved, it starts a domino effect. We become financial ambassadors and educate our peers.”

— Sofia Miceli, Money Smart Kid 2018 Winner

“Wisdom that has always stuck with me is first we learn to read, then we read to learn. I think of this as the driving force behind our Kids Read initiative. We want financial education to be a pillar of early learning.”

— Venus R. Lockett, State Chair, Money Smart Week® Georgia
Money Smart Week® partners found many creative and inventive ways to engage consumers. Some taught classroom style, others held round table discussions or shared slide decks to nudge consumers to take positive actions. Several partners offered self-paced computer-based training on topics such as slashing debt or boosting a credit score. Tweet chats engaged people online, discussing topics such as the economics of home ownership. One Chicago-based partner calls Money Smart Week® “the unlottery” because it helps people succeed based on skills, as opposed to luck.

“From kids to adults, the money conversation is a tough topic. If the goal is to get consumers to improve their financial decision making, you need to connect with people, be it through music, fitness, magic shows or merit badges.”

– Jacqueline Howard, State Chair, Money Smart Week® North Carolina

Using the power of music and his own personal story, rock musician Gooding and his band inspire young people, showing them how smart financial decisions will help them see their dreams as possibilities.

“My job is for them to suspend disbelief for 10 or 15 minutes, while they’re still in that rock ‘n roll mode, and explain to them that financial literacy gives you the freedom to do what you want with the rest of your life.”

– Gooding, Guitar & Vocals
Traditional and social media increased the awareness of Money Smart Week® in 2018. For example, we hosted our first ever Facebook Live event with Beth Kobliner, a New York Times bestselling author.

This year, more partners teamed up to increase class attendance and offer more specialized sessions, tools and resources. This was a successful way to boost participation and also allowed partners to play to their strengths, whether it was content, location or client base. One example: the Detroit Library system, three credit unions and several civic organizations collaborated for the first Money Smart Week Girl Scouts program, offered to dozens of troops. Together, they taught the scouts personal finance basics so that they could earn the Money Manager merit badge.

“Safe Passage provides a secure way for children and families to walk to and from school in the South Chicago area. The Managing Money event provided by Claretian Associates, MB Financial and Spanish Coalition gave the Safe Passage team a workshop to help them achieve future financial goals such as purchasing their first home, car and credit management.”

— Ana Quijano, Community Program Manager, Claretian Associates
Partnerships are vital to our shared success. The Money Smart Week® Team thanks and acknowledges our partners and their contributions.
