

The Greater Sage-Grouse is a true westerner, living only where sagebrush grows. Adult males can be 30 inches long, that's MUCH bigger than a cat! During the spring, males strut on dancing grounds known as leks to attract females. Sage-Grouse in Nevada has decreased, their habitat too. But they are still found in nearly every county within central and northern Nevada. Sage-Grouse diets change from insects and small flowering plants in the spring and summer, to sagebrush leaves in the fall and winter. Find out more: www.blm.gov
