Guidelines for Submission to the NHA Blog

The National Humanities Alliance Blog features voices from throughout the humanities community--scholars at any phase in their career, K-12 educators, public humanities professionals, as well as those who have participated in a course of study in the humanities or public humanities programs.

As an advocacy organization, we are specifically interested in highlighting the value of the humanities to a variety of audiences, both within and outside the humanities community. We welcome blog posts that focus on a specific humanities project and describe its impact in a way that will resonate widely.

A few examples:
- A public-facing program that provides educational opportunities to underserved populations
- A cultural tourism effort that fosters economic development in a particular region
- Preservation activities that rescue cultural heritage that would otherwise be lost
- Scholarly work relevant to a specific community or a contemporary policy debate
- Humanities teaching practices that lead to deep student engagement

These are, of course, just examples and we are always eager to learn more about the ways that humanities work effects positive change, whether on a local or global scale.

Blog posts should:
- Focus on a particular humanities project (i.e. a scholarly project, museum exhibition, community oral history project)
- Showcase the impact of the program in a way that will resonate both within and outside the humanities community
- Highlight the funding, partnerships, and collaborations that made the work possible
- Include a title
- Include hyperlinks to any online material
- Be approximately 500-800 words
- Include an author bio of approximately 50 words, along with links to your professional website and/or Twitter handle.
- Include an image or video related to the project, if possible.

Please note, NHA staff might offer edits or request revisions for focus, length, style and clarity.

To submit a blog entry for consideration:
Email the entry and accompanying images/video to Beatrice Gurwitz at bgurwitz@nhalliance.org.

Images may be sent as JPEG, TIFF, or PNG files. Please provide captions and credits for any photographs. It is the responsibility of the guest blogger to secure permissions from the image copyright holder. Permissions should be forwarded along with the image and the associated credit line.
