Decriminalizing sex work would lead to an increase in human trafficking.

Decriminalizing consensual sex work will not change trafficking laws, and in fact, decriminalization will make it easier to locate and provide resources to people who are trafficked. Without the threat of arrest, sex workers will be able to be allies in ending trafficking, and more trafficking victims will likely come forward without facing as much stigma.

SAFE COMMUNITIES START WITH RESOURCES, NOT ARRESTS
De-Mystifying the Decriminalization of Sex Work

MYTH

Decriminalizing sex work would lead to an increase in human trafficking.

FACT

Decriminalizing consensual sex work will not change trafficking laws, and in fact, decriminalization will make it easier to locate and provide resources to people who are trafficked. Without the threat of arrest, sex workers will be able to be allies in ending trafficking, and more trafficking victims will likely come forward without facing as much stigma.

Won’t decriminalization increase public safety hazards like used condoms on the street?

Street-based sex workers don't want to engage in sex work outside either, but this problem isn't about sex work as much as it's about homelessness. Sex workers who have a safe place to work have more options for disposing of condoms and other trash. Sex workers experiencing homelessness, however, are often forced to engage in street-based sex work, which puts them at increased risk of violence.
