

Oregon versus Federal Law Ensuring Workplace Support For Breastfeeding Mothers and Babies

The Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act (“PPACA”), amended section 7 of the Fair Labor Standards Act (“FLSA”) to require employers to provide break time for nursing mothers to express breast milk does not preempt State laws that provide greater protections to employees. The provision of federal or state law providing greater protection is highlighted in green.

Employers covered by law	Applies to employers with 25 or more employees unless to do so would provide undue hardship. Any employer can request to be exempt due to undue hardship.	Applies to all employers covered under FLSA. All employees who work for the covered employer, regardless of work site, are counted. An employee includes full-time, part-time, and any other individual who meets the FLSA definition of employee. Only employers with fewer than 50 employees can ask to be exempt because of undue hardship (see federal definition).
Type of Employee	Includes employees engaged in administrative, executive or professional work (all employees covered, regardless of overtime status).	Employees who work for employers covered by the FLSA and are not exempt from section 7, which sets forth the FLSA's overtime pay requirements, are entitled to breaks to express milk.
Schools as Employer	“Each school district board shall adopt a policy regarding breast-feeding in the workplace to accommodate an employee who needs to express milk for her child. Each policy must, at a minimum, designate a location at the school facility, other than a public restroom or toilet stall, in close proximity to the employees work area for the employee to express milk in private. A policy adopted under this subsection, including the designated locations where an employee may express milk, must be published in an employee handbook. In addition, a list of the designated locations must be readily available, upon request, in the central office of each school facility and in the central administrative office for each school district.”	Federal law is silent on this issue.

Time for expressing milk	Up to 30 minutes per 4 hours of working	Requires reasonable break time for an employee to express breast milk for her nursing child ... each time the employee has the need to express the milk.
Space for expressing milk	The location must be in close proximity to the employee’s work area, and cannot be a toilet stall or restroom. Businesses would not necessarily have to have a dedicated lactation room. A vacant office or conference room could suffice, so long as it is private. A cubicle is not considered private.	“Employers are required to provide a place, other than a bathroom, that is shielded from view and free from intrusion from coworkers and the public. A bathroom, even if private, is not a permissible location under the Act. The location provided must be functional as a space for expressing breast milk. If the space is not dedicated to the nursing mother’s use, it must be available when needed in order to meet the statutory requirement. A space temporarily created or converted into a space or made available when needed by the nursing mother is sufficient provided that the space is shielded from view, and free from intrusion from co-workers and the public.”
Eligibility for health insurance	Employers must count pumping time for the purpose of determining eligibility for health insurance.	Federal law is silent on this issue
Job Duties	An employer may allow an employee to temporarily change job duties if the employee’s regular job duties do not allow her to express milk.	Federal law is silent on this issue
Requirements for employees	An employee must provide reasonable written/verbal notice that she intends to express breastmilk at work.	Not required
