Nurturing Black Children:
Black Mothers Speak About Raising &
Teaching Black Lives in White Spaces

Friday, February 22
4:00 p.m. - 6:30 p.m.
Portland Association of Teachers
345 NE 8th Ave, Portland

This panel features Black parents who are also educators. Panelists will share their experiences about raising, educating, and supporting Black children in mostly white spaces. Through storytelling and prose, these moms will provide glimpses into the conversations they have with their own children as well as Black students in their care. Participants will leave understanding the dilemmas these moms wrestle with as parent educators, and with insight into how to keep Black lives safe in schools. Participants will have time to discuss, ask questions, and plan for their own classrooms.

For more information, visit: pdxteachers.org.