

Campaign for Free College Tuition

Who are we?

The Campaign for Free College Tuition (CFCT) is a 501(c)(3) non-profit organization established to educate parents, students, the higher education community, and policymakers about efforts needed to fundamentally reform our nation's system for financing higher education.

What is our plan?

CFCT has a four step plan that calls for the creation of a federally funded National Promise Scholarship to provide every academically qualified student from low and middle income families enough money to pay in-state tuition at public two and four year colleges. Our plan does this without raising federal income taxes. The federal government actually already spends enough money on student aid to cover tuition for every public college student in America.

What can you do to help?

Thanks for asking! We can only achieve this dream if we work together. The first thing you can do is educate yourself. Check out our website, study our resource kit, and ask us for policy memos and talking points. Advocate for free college tuition on social media and find friends to join the cause. If you're interested in volunteering, please email volunteer@freecollegenow.org for more information.

What do we believe?

We believe college tuition should and can be free, just as it is in increasing numbers of communities across the country. We believe that cost should not be a barrier to attaining education for any American who is academically prepared and personally determined to earn a degree.

Is this idea too radical?

Absolutely not! America has always used government resources to provide sufficient funds to those willing and able to acquire the skills and knowledge. Americans have always understood that higher education is the economic driver for the entire nation. This is an idea that some states have already undertaken. Now, we're simply asking to increase those resources on the state level. Luckily, this is an idea with bipartisan support, so we're confident we can make it happen.
