

Honor the Fallen by Transforming the Future

Statement from Diane Sare, Candidate US Senate

- NY 2022

In May of 2016, the late Lyndon LaRouche, in response to a question from a military veteran about how to honor the first responders who gave their lives on 9/11, said “We need to do something a little stronger: We have to set up some kind of memorial, a living memorial for people who died in that case. That would do something. Because the United States so far has failed to do anything about that—a few handfuls of people have been concerned with that. But we have to get the humiliation expressed by the people as a whole, for their failure to defend life, human life, when that life was needed.”

Diane Sare, Candidate US Senate-NY 2022 Photo: SteveMack Photography

Nineteen years after that fateful day, we have yet to get to the bottom of what actually occurred, in order to ensure that such acts of terror and violence never occur again. Meanwhile, The world has not become safer, and people have not become better. We have nearly 3 million veterans of wars in Afghanistan and Iraq since 9/11 and 22 of them are committing suicide every day.

2020 is also the 75th anniversary of the end of World War II. President Franklin Roosevelt had a vision of the post war world which would be a world “free from want, and free from fear,” a world of “freedom of speech, and freedom to worship God” according to one’s beliefs. Somehow the attacks of 9/11 became the pretext to drive us further from those freedoms.

The memory of that fateful day in 2001 must become a turning point for our nation and for mankind. On that day, thousands of people, did heroic things, and acted selflessly to aid others. President Putin of Russia, called President Bush to not only offer condolences, but to inform him that Russia was taking down its automatic security and defense systems to make sure that global war was not accidentally triggered as a result of terrorist action.

Russia, which lost 27 million people in World War II, also donated the Teardrop Memorial, which stands in Bayonne, NJ to this day. On the 10th anniversary of 9/11 the Russian Red Army Chorus sang “God Bless America” to the NYPD Ceremonial Unit at a military tattoo in Quebec City, in a performance even more moving today because the Russian baritone soloist Grigory Osipov was among the 64 musicians and dancers who died when their plane crashed in the Black Sea on December 25th 2016.

Imagine a future where the young people turning 19 this year could tell their children and grandchildren, “Finally, 19 years after 9/11 the American people grew weary of perpetual war, perpetual poverty, and perpetual surveillance and decided to fulfill the vision of FDR.”

The Schiller Institute, founded by Helga Zepp LaRouche is holding a very special conference dedicated to convening a summit of the leaders of the world’s most powerful nations where the great problems facing humanity can be addressed: the need for a global health platform to prevent pandemics, the need for a dialogue of cultures and poverty eradication to end war, a shared mission to explore the solar system and discover solutions for the many challenges facing mankind. This virtual conference will be joined by thousands of people from all over the world for two days September 5th and 6th. William Binney and I will be participating in that, and would like to invite you to join us. There is no fee to register at www.SchillerInstitute.com. It’s time for mankind to move to a new paradigm before it’s too late.

William Binney, former National Security Agency official, on 9/11:

“Leave no question unanswered.”

When a Danish journalist asked William Binney in late August about the breaking story, “Intelligence scandal in Denmark: Defense Intelligence has been giving massive amounts of raw electronic data to the NSA,” he responded: “This is exactly the problem I saw, that NSA, CIA, FBI and Bush, it started with Bush, Cheney, [former NSA director Michael] Hayden and [former CIA chief George] Tenet. They set up this process in 2001, and then they extended it to various other countries in the world, including the Five Eyes [U.S., U.K. Canada, Australia, New Zealand].” “In 2001” refers to the period immediately following the destruction of the World Trade Center, when a surveillance system that Binney had designed, and had been prevented from installing to protect American citizens, was then appropriated and used to conduct unwarranted surveillance against American citizens.

William Binney was the former technical director of the World Geopolitical and Military Analysis and Reporting section of the National Security Agency (NSA), where he worked for 30 years, until he resigned after the catastrophic intelligence failure of 9/11. Binney, whose work has been featured in documentaries such as PBS Frontline’s two-part “United States of Secrets” and the movie “A Good American,” was the designer of the “ThinThread” security system, which may well have prevented the 9/11 attack on the World Trade Center from occurring, had he and his associates not been deliberately prevented from deploying it. “But the problem also was that it was a system that would’ve uncovered all of the criminal activity of our government employees and our secret intelligence agencies, and also others in the world, too,” Binney said. Instead, “universal surveillance” capabilities that he personally designed to protect Americans from terrorist attacks were deployed after 9/11 to illegally monitor virtually every citizen of the United States in possession of any electronic device.

“Denmark, I knew was involved, quite a long time ago,” Binney continued. “And the point is, they are all basically pulling a sham on everybody on the planet. It has never been a problem to be able to find bad guys without giving up security anywhere. We proved it in 2000, and also 1999, was the earliest we were showing that, that it was possible to do that.”

The 3000 that died at Ground Zero, the thousands more that died from medical complications originating from 9/11, and the hundreds of thousands, even millions, killed in combat and as “collateral damage” in its aftermath worldwide, deserve justice. The living, their surviving descendants, deserve the truth. Binney has further infuriated the “secret government” apparatus by asserting that he can prove that the 2016 hack of the Democratic National Committee, never occurred as represented.

“The Guccifer 2.0 data that we looked at, we clearly showed the speeds of downloads of that data to a thumb drive were possible, but it was not possible to send that data across the internet to Russia or anywhere else outside the United States, or even inside the United States to a lot of places. They couldn’t get it because they didn’t have these high-speed lines to carry that kind of rate transfer. We proved that. Not only did we show the speeds that were involved, but we also showed that you couldn’t do it. We tried to do our transfer from Albania, from Netherlands, from the U.K.. The further east we got, the less speed we got. We couldn’t achieve the higher speeds going further east; it went down,” Binney said.

Former NSA Technical Director William Binney answering questions about the failure to prevent 9/11. Photo: CCYB-SA Miciel Tavera

Binney is now conducting what he calls the “Leave No Questions Unanswered” virtual tour. He has challenged anyone to prove him wrong. He has yet to hear back from former CIA Director Mike Pompeo, who interviewed him at the request of President Donald Trump on the “Russiagate” matter a full three years ago. Asked if he fears for his safety, Binney responds, “they’re not after me—I’m after them.”

Binney will be appearing at the virtual conference, “War Drive Towards Armageddon or A New Paradigm United Towards the Common Aims of Mankind” on Saturday, September 5, at the Schiller Institute. To RSVP for that conference, visit www.schillerinstitute.com.