

SFF Tasmania Policy Summary

Shooters, Fishers & Farmers Party Tasmania (SFF Tasmania) was started with an aim to protect the freedoms, rights and culture of all Tasmanians, both now and for generations to come. There is a growing discontent from amongst everyday Tasmanians, particularly rural and regional Tasmanians, that the major parties have largely ignored their needs, only calling on them during election campaigns when they need their support and votes, but promptly forgetting their promises the minute the polling booths close.

We believe Tasmanians deserve better. They deserve politicians that remember their role is primarily to serve the public and to be a voice for their constituents.

For that reason, we have built our policy platform based on communication we have had with real people all across Tasmania. We feel these policies not only reflect the needs of real Tasmanians; we also believe that they are based on common sense and are realistic aims that governments should be seeking. Each of our policies are grounded in the three pillars of freedom, rights and culture.

Freedom

SFF Tasmania is committed to protecting freedom of speech, freedom of association, and freedom of religious belief. We believe that freedom should form the cornerstone of Australia's democracy. Sadly, these basic freedoms continue to be eroded by governments and a political class that is out of touch with ordinary citizens.

Rights

Despite pressure from the UN, Australia remains one of the few Western democracies to deny its citizens a Bill of Rights that enshrines their inalienable rights to be free to live without undue and unnecessary intrusion by the government. SFF Tasmania is committed to pushing both the state and Federal governments to remove oppressive red and green tape and to implement a basic Bill of Rights for Australian citizens.

Culture

SFF Tasmania is committed to protecting traditional and cultural heritage including ancient heritage, western culture, traditional recreational pursuits, and pluralistic democracy.

If elected to parliament, our candidates will use their vote to pursue the following policies:
