Sharice Davids' Third District Congressional Campaign Locates Headquarters in Wyandotte County

KANSAS CITY, Kan. - Sharice Davids, Democratic candidate in Kansas' Third Congressional District - has announced her campaign will locate its headquarters in the historic Strawberry Hill neighborhood of Kansas City, Kansas in Wyandotte County.

"My campaign is making a statement with our headquarters," Davids said. "Wyandotte County is too often overshadowed and left out of the Third District discussion. My candidacy is centered on amplifying all voices and our choice of office location reflects that."

The headquarters will be the center point of community outreach as the Davids' campaign builds out its field operation, working to personally reach as many voters as possible. The campaign has begun an extensive canvassing program, using only volunteers to go door-to-door throughout the district to introduce Davids' campaign to unseat Rep. Kevin Yoder and change the face of Kansas politics.

"Kevin Yoder votes against our healthcare, against our safety, and against our environment," Davids said. "He represents the Congressional Republicans and his special interest donors - not the diverse people of the Third District. It's time for a new voice and perspective in Washington D.C."

Davids invites the public to join her and campaign team members at an "Open Office Party" to be held this Saturday, May 12 from 6-8pm at 416 N. 5th Street in Kansas City, Kansas. All are welcome, including children.

About Sharice: Shawnee resident Sharice Davids is a Cornell Law graduate, White House Fellow, and daughter of a single mother Army veteran. As the only Democrat in this race with extensive federal policy experience, she is uniquely poised to put the values and interests of the Third District into action in Washington D.C. When elected, Sharice will be the first Native American Congresswoman and the first LGBTQ member of the Kansas delegation.
