

Paul Schlunt is currently a co-leader of the San Diego Regional Soaring Spirits. He first became familiar with the organization by attending Camp Widow in 2014 at the suggestion of his grief counselor. Since then he's become familiar with both the local and larger widowed community.

He is an ardent believer in the healing power on being immersed in the natural wilderness, and regularly leads his employer's hiking club.

Paul works in the San Diego area as a Staff Scientist in Product Development within the Clinical Diagnostics Industry. When time allows he mentors college seniors in Bioengineering and Chemical engineering.

Life experience as well as the community he's become a part of through Soaring Spirits, has helped to give him a new purpose. He is preparing to return to school and earn a Masters in Clinical Psychology Counseling, to ultimately become a grief counselor.
