

Amy Florian is a nationally recognized speaker and teacher who uses her personal experience of being widowed along with the best of current research for her engaging and dynamic presentations. She holds a Master's Degree and she is a Fellow in Thanatology (the highest level of certification in the field of death and grief studies). She founded Corgenius, a company that teaches professionals how to better serve people in times of transition and loss, and still facilitates a widowed support group she co-founded almost 30 years ago. She taught for almost ten years in the graduate department of Loyola University in Chicago, as well in the undergraduate departments at three other universities, and has published over one hundred articles and four books, including "A Friend Indeed: Help Those You Love When They Grieve." Amy is a member of the Advisory Board of Soaring Spirits International, where she shares her passion for helping people heal and live fully.
