Millions in funding for vulnerable students being diverted to other expenses: report

According to a new report from Social Planning Toronto, that money is "explicitly designated" to provide extra funding and support for students whose "socio-economic circumstances place them at increased risk for academic struggle."

"Given the terms of the Learning Opportunities Grant, it would appear that the needs of the Toronto's most marginalized students are protected. The reality in Toronto schools, however, is that the learning potential of some students is being severely jeopardized," the report states.

The report says that 28% of TDSB students in junior kindergarten to Grade 6 are from families earning less than $30,000.

The report says that 28% of TDSB students in junior kindergarten to Grade 6 are from families earning less than $30,000.

The report suggests that only $66,389,519 of the $127 million in Learning Opportunity Grant funding was actually used for its intended purpose in 2014-2015.

Toronto's most marginalized students are protected. The reality in Toronto schools, however, is that the learning potential of some students is being severely jeopardized.

"Given the terms of the Learning Opportunities Grant, it would appear that the needs of the Toronto's most marginalized students are protected. The reality in Toronto schools, however, is that the learning potential of some students is being severely jeopardized," the report states.

More than $60 million in provincial funds earmarked for vulnerable students ended up going towards balancing the Toronto District School Board’s budget last year, a new report from Social Planning Toronto has found.

According to Social Planning Toronto, that money is "explicitly designated" to provide extra funding and support for students whose "socio-economic circumstances place them at increased risk for academic struggle."

"Given the terms of the Learning Opportunities Grant, it would appear that the needs of the Toronto's most marginalized students are protected. The reality in Toronto schools, however, is that the learning potential of some students is being severely jeopardized," the report states.

The report says that 28% of TDSB students in junior kindergarten to Grade 6 are from families earning less than $30,000.

The report suggests that only $66,389,519 of the $127 million in Learning Opportunity Grant funding was actually used for its intended purpose in 2014-2015.

The report says that 28% of TDSB students in junior kindergarten to Grade 6 are from families earning less than $30,000.

According to Social Planning Toronto, that money is "explicitly designated" to provide extra funding and support for students whose "socio-economic circumstances place them at increased risk for academic struggle."

"Given the terms of the Learning Opportunities Grant, it would appear that the needs of the Toronto's most marginalized students are protected. The reality in Toronto schools, however, is that the learning potential of some students is being severely jeopardized," the report states.

"Given the terms of the Learning Opportunities Grant, it would appear that the needs of the Toronto's most marginalized students are protected. The reality in Toronto schools, however, is that the learning potential of some students is being severely jeopardized," the report states.

"Given the terms of the Learning Opportunities Grant, it would appear that the needs of the Toronto's most marginalized students are protected. The reality in Toronto schools, however, is that the learning potential of some students is being severely jeopardized," the report states.

"Given the terms of the Learning Opportunities Grant, it would appear that the needs of the Toronto's most marginalized students are protected. The reality in Toronto schools, however, is that the learning potential of some students is being severely jeopardized," the report states.

"Given the terms of the Learning Opportunities Grant, it would appear that the needs of the Toronto's most marginalized students are protected. The reality in Toronto schools, however, is that the learning potential of some students is being severely jeopardized," the report states.

"Given the terms of the Learning Opportunities Grant, it would appear that the needs of the Toronto's most marginalized students are protected. The reality in Toronto schools, however, is that the learning potential of some students is being severely jeopardized," the report states.

More than $60 million in provincial funds earmarked for vulnerable students ended up going towards balancing the Toronto District School Board’s budget last year, a new report from Social Planning Toronto has found.

The report says that 28% of TDSB students in junior kindergarten to Grade 6 are from families earning less than $30,000.

The report suggests that only $66,389,519 of the $127 million in Learning Opportunity Grant funding was actually used for its intended purpose in 2014-2015.

The remaining $61 million in funding went to general revenues, the report found.

According to Social Planning Toronto, that money is "explicitly designated" to provide extra funding and support for students whose "socio-economic circumstances place them at increased risk for academic struggle."

"Given the terms of the Learning Opportunities Grant, it would appear that the needs of the Toronto's most marginalized students are protected. The reality in Toronto schools, however, is that the learning potential of some students is being severely jeopardized," the report states.

The report says that 28% of TDSB students in junior kindergarten to Grade 6 are from families earning less than $30,000.

The report suggests that only $66,389,519 of the $127 million in Learning Opportunity Grant funding was actually used for its intended purpose in 2014-2015.

The remaining $61 million in funding went to general revenues, the report found.