A new report that looks at the 'price of inaction' says poverty is costing Toronto an estimated $4.5 billion to $5.5 billion a year.

CBC News
'Spending on poverty reduction is a good economic investment,' report concludes Poverty is costing Toronto billions a year, report says

Toronto's Sounds of the Season
Toronto's Sounds of the Season

Toronto doctor screening for poverty using postal codes
Hidden poverty lurks in basements of Vaughan

The report’s authors say they arrived at the $4.5 billion to $5.5 billion financial estimate by adding estimates made by other researchers to their own.

"There is no definitive reassurance of all the full economic impact of poverty to Toronto," the report reads. "There is a study of, and the report..."

A year after launching poverty strategy, what's been done?
Hidden poverty lurks in basements

Toronto neurosurgeon, 40, charged with murder in death of physician wife
Ontario police say Amber Alert continues for 9-year-old missing from Toronto

Poverty still 'gripping' capital of Canada, nurse report
Report Typo or Error
Send Feedback