RESTORING ENDANGERED SEABIRDS: LESSONS FROM PUFFINS & TERNs

Dr. Stephen Kress
Vice-President for Bird Conservation
National Audubon Society and Director
Seabird Restoration Program & Hog Island Camp

In a world where humans have decimated seabird populations, a beacon of hope shines from recent efforts to restore puffin and tern populations on Maine islands. Learn how methods for restoring puffins and terns are helping rare seabird species worldwide and how new tracking technology is revealing ocean habitats that are essential to seabird conservation.
