

Why Is Giant Targeting Working Families?

Like you, Walter Kellingham wants to provide for his family and keep them safe. He has worked at Giant's warehouse in Jessup, M.D., for more than 11 years, moving over 14,000 pounds of cardboard each day. He doesn't mind the hard work because his job gives him the wages and benefits he needs as the sole breadwinner for his wife and children, including special medical treatments for his five-year-old son.

Now, Giant wants to take away Walters's wages and benefits.

Giant has hired an anti-worker company, C&S Grocers, to eliminate Walter's job and the jobs of hundreds of other warehouse workers in our area. Under the cloak of C&S, Giant is closing its Jessup warehouse, forcing hundreds onto the area's swollen unemployment rolls.

Giant's actions will hurt more than just Walter and his co-workers—Giant's actions will hurt our community. The loss of these good jobs will mean less tax money for local schools, hospitals, recreation centers, road repair and other valuable and needed community services.

Why is Giant doing this? The answer is simple -- corporate greed. Giant's Dutch parent company wants to take more of your shopping dollars home to the Netherlands. These days, Giant has become a mean-spirited company that doesn't care about its customers, the community or its employees.

Let's give Walter Kellingham and the rest of the Giant's warehouse workers some help. By helping them, we are really helping our own community.
