

Sam Bayley

Regional Coordinator - Kimberley

"I love working with people and communities to develop projects for the enhancement of country, culture and livelihoods. I am a strong believer in partnerships and enjoy facilitating the coming together of diverse groups for a common purpose."

Based in Broome, Western Australia, Sam has over 15 years' experience working with indigenous and rural communities. He has extensive experience in relationship building and project development with ranger groups, landcare groups and farming communities. Sam has a proven track record in the brokering of indigenous partnerships with government, non-government and corporate sectors for cultural and conservation-based projects.

Sam's expert knowledge relating to the development and implementation of strategic plans (e.g. Healthy Country Plans) across large complex landscapes including the development of monitoring, evaluation, reporting and improvement (MERI) frameworks makes him a valuable member of the Conservation Management team.

Sam specialises in:

managing Open Standards and Healthy Country Planning projects for Indigenous communities and ranger groups | development and implementation of strategic and operational plans | leading, developing and mobilizing teams | partnerships management | project design and management |
